Cost of dying rockets as the number of pauper's funerals rises

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SOARING funeral costs are pushing cash-strapped families to breaking point, with fears of an increase in 'pauper's funerals'.

With costs now hitting £3,400 for an average funeral in Kent, experts warn the number of no-frills farewells funded by the public purse are set to soar.

And the increasing fees charged for an average burial are plunging those left behind into debt as they struggle to meet the costs.

The so-called 'pauper's funerals' – or public health funerals – are paid for by local authorities when families are too poor to meet the costs, or people have no relatives or friends.

They involve a burial or cremation, which might not be in the deceased's community, and a basic service.

But while the numbers are traditionally low, they are on the rise, putting a strain on public funds.

From the 11 Kent councils who responded to our request for figures, some 67 people had to rely on the state to fund the disposal of their remains over the last two years.

The figures show almost half of Kent's councils have seen small rises. But fears have been raised this figure will grow as funeral costs continue to soar.

Simon Cox from financial services company Sun Life Direct, which commissioned a report on the problem, said burial and cremation fees – which make up a third of the total costs of a funeral – were rising fast in Kent.

"They are rising above inflation; during austere times it's a way for councils to raise money," he said.

"Funeral director costs haven't risen

'Someone has died and you're getting in debt'

as fast although they have to take other factors into account, for example, the number of deaths over the last 40 years has declined, but this is expected to rise by almost 20 per cent in the next two decades."

He said although people could get help through the Government's Funeral Payment scheme, which offers a one-off payment of around £1,200 to help pay costs, figures have shown more than half of the applications made last year were rejected.

"We don't have a crystal ball, but the situation in terms of austerity measures means we won't see any money from central government. This situation will worsen and public health funerals are likely to increase," said Mr Cox.

He said the debt and despair had a terrible impact on bereaved families, adding: "Someone has just died, you're getting into debt – it's difficult.

"We're holding a Parliamentary round the table meeting to discuss this in November. More people need to be aware."

Manager of Thanet Citizens Advice Bureau, Ian Driver, agreed the rising cost of funerals was a big problem.

"In more deprived areas like Thanet particularly," he said. "During these austere times I think we will start to see an increase in people making enquiries about support for funeral costs.

"Inevitably we will see a rise in pauper's funerals too. There's no sign of things getting better. People just don't have the money to set aside for a loved one passing away."

A Shepway council spokeswoman said it always used burials in single graves, while at other Kent councils cremations were usual.

A Maidstone council spokeswoman said in the case of burials, the deceased would be buried in an "unpurchased" single grave, which stays in the council's possession.

Dover council – which stressed public health services were no longer referred to as 'pauper's' funerals – said local authorities had a duty to bury or cremate the body of any person found dead where suitable arrangements had not been made. Where possible, it tries and claim costs back from the deceased's estate.

Referring to the type of service, a Swale council spokesman said: "Each case is treated on its merit, however, if we know the deceased's wishes we would go with that option."

SOCIAL CARE

'Dumping ground' stigma hurtful to vulnerable and abused care kids

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

AN EXPERT in social care has urged authorities to stop calling Kent a "dumping ground" for vulnerable out-of-county children.

Mark Kerr, a researcher and lecturer in social policy at the University of Kent, also stressed Kent County Council needed to gather strong evidence of inappropriate placements – where a looked-after child in care is placed far from home.

Earlier this year, KCC called for new regulations to ensure children are placed into care within 15 miles of their homes, instead of the current 20 miles.

More than 1,200 out-of-county children currently live in Kent – the majority in coastal areas such as Thanet. They are placed here by other authorities, mainly London boroughs, giving the area the label of "dumping ground".

Mr Kerr said: "What they need to do is articulate the problem, get strong evidence of bad placements – it's unrealistic to say all of them are inappropriate

EMPATHY: An expert has asked people to consider how the vulnerable children feel when they hear they are not wanted – and make sure the Department of Education investigate.

"Calling it a 'dumping ground' is not dealing with it well. Think of vulnerable children hearing 'we don't want them'.

"I sympathise with the position KCC is in – recent years have seen changes in the way public services are delivered with local authorities having more responsibilities but not given adequate funding. But we're talking about people who may have suffered significant trauma, neglect or abuse."

He stressed many of the county's care homes are run by private companies who provide all services from the home, taking the strain off Kent's resources.

"KCC should not in any circumstances be experiencing financial costs for looked-after children from other areas.

"Further, no child should be placed out of area without both educational and mental health provision confirmed before they are placed."

It was recently revealed that 20 care homes in Thanet were catering exclusively for out-of-county children.

Mr Kerr said: "Care is a business. Providers go to cheaper areas and take on cheaper staff. This is why places like Thanet have so many out-of-county placements."

Earlier this year, social chiefs at KCC demanded talks will London Mayor Boris Johnson over the escalating crisis of children being placed in Kent.

Cabinet member for specialist children's services at KCC Cllr Jenny Whittle said the term "dumping ground" was "unfortunate".

"This is not about demonising these children, my aim is to find what is right for them," she said.

"We have placing councils calling us for a list of children's homes in the area – if it was me I would be asking not just for a list, but where they are and whether the children will be safe. It's the placing council's responsibility to ensure they are safeguarded, but this isn't always happening."

In response to Mr Kerr's comments about gathering evidence, Cllr Whittle said: "The problem is the placing councils are meant to notify us but we know in many cases they're not doing so. We sometimes find out when schools contact us after being told to take a child.

"Mr Kerr is right that some care homes provide services, but there are other children in foster care or children's homes where KCC services are used.

"We shouldn't get hung up on cost, this is about what is right for the child.

"We need to create a national strategy to ensure out-of-county placements are by exception and not a routine practice. Children should be close to home."

Bee-ware, cost of honey is set to rocket as wet weather hits hives

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

THE PRICE of honey produced in Kent is set to soar after bee-keepers experienced one of the worst crops in recent history.

Honey production is down by up to 60 per cent in some cases due to the wettest summer in 100 years. It means 1lb in weight of the sticky substance could rocket to £6.50 by Christmas – compared to £4.50 today.

The price is set to rise as a result of the shortage, which will see bee-keepers feed their insects with an increased amount of syrup over the winter months to try and keep them alive.

But there are also fears queen bees may not be strong enough to survive the cold months after suffering a poor mating season.

Peter Hutton from Tonbridge, who has been bee-keeping for 53 years, called this year's honey production "dreadful" and said the weather has had an impact on keepers all over Britain.

He said: "It's not just county-wide, it's countrywide. The bees weren't building up until May, and this affected the line of nectar."

"It's a difficult time for bee-keepers, and everyone is affected without the general public realising, but they will realise when it hits their pockets."

Mr Hutton believes his crop is down 40 per cent compared to last year, and said bad weather and the use of pesticides were having a negative effect on honey production.

He added: "The price will only increase to a ceiling where people can afford it, so the well-off will be alright but the rest won't."

The honey shortage comes at a time when apple crops are down 20 per cent compared to last year, and other farmers are struggling with the adverse weather conditions experienced earlier this year.

Fellow bee-keeper Alasdair Bruce, who does not sell his honey, has also expressed concern about the production and called 2012 the "worst I have ever experienced".

Mr Bruce, from Margate, said: "Normally, you get a spring flow which really gets the hive in action with high levels of production, but what has happened this year is the whole cycle has been affected by the downturn."

He added there may be a shortage of honey until the next growing period starts: "Most of the beekeepers, if they have a good year, will put some honey aside to make sure they are covered for the lean spells, but shops don't understand it's a finite resource."

"The feedback I'm getting is that people think bee-keepers are making a huge profit, when, in reality, if shops require the honey, we have to buy supplies to keep our bees."

It is hoped production could return to normal – weather permitting – next year.

There will be a number of tours, choral and organ demonstrations, exhibitions, and displays.

EDUCATION

GCSE changes will be 'nonsense'

MOVES to replace the current GCSE exams with a baccalaureate system have come under fire by an education expert who says the "passing and failing" culture must stop.

Secretary of the Kent division of the National Union for Teachers, John Walder, accused education secretary Michael Gove of simply wanting to return to the "good old days", adding that he had little understanding of the education system.

Mr Gove is looking to replace GCSEs in core subjects with a qualification called the English Baccalaureate Certificate (EBacc), starting with English, maths, and science, in 2017.

He said it was "time to tackle grade inflation and dumbing down" and "time to raise aspirations and restore rigour in exams".

But Mr Walder called it "nonsense".

"Michael Gove's speech was one cliché after another," he said. "He says this is a baccalaureate, it's not. What he's doing is re-writing the school certificate and higher certificate from the 1950s – which didn't work."

"We've got to get away from this passing or failing culture. We need to give children the incentive to show their ability. We need to forget about A, B, Cs and exams that don't measure what children can do. The focus is too much on passing or failing."

He added: "(EBacc) might not even come in as the plan is they would be introduced in 2017, but there's a general election before that."

While Mr Walder criticised the shake-up, Kent County Council said it welcomed moves to look at the current exam system.

Tory cabinet member for education Cllr Mike Whiting said: "Michael Gove's commitment to strengthening qualifications for 15 and 16-year-olds, and making sure children get the best education, is very welcome."

"We need to make sure children have the strongest qualifications and best chance to compete – nationally and internationally."

"At KCC, we will be looking carefully at the details and talking to teachers and headteachers to see how we can make the most useful contribution to the consultation and planning ahead of 2015, when we expect the proposal to be put in place."

Fears have been raised that the EBacc could see less academically gifted pupils leave school without any qualifications.

HERITAGE

War memorial unveiled as search begins for relatives of fallen heroes

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IT has taken 25 years, and an anonymous donation of £15,000, but next month a new war memorial – commemorating the fallen heroes of World War One – will be finally unveiled.

And now the hunt is on for relatives of those remembered to attend the dedication ceremony.

The original memorial outside the Holy Trinity Church in Milton Regis was destroyed by the Great Storm of 1987 which wreaked havoc across the county. Since then, all that remained was a stump of stone from the original and a rose bush, planted to remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

To make amends, six years ago efforts began in earnest to construct a new memorial. But as fundraising efforts by the Milton Regis War Memorial committee stepped up the economy took a nose-dive, and earlier this year those behind the idea prepared to shelve their existing plans and downsize.

But after its plight was highlighted in the Sunday Telegraph earlier this year, a generous mystery donor sent the campaign a cheque which covered nearly half of the £35,000 total cost.

This allowed campaigners to finally get the memorial plans under way. And on October 13 a special dedication ceremony will take place for one of the few new memorials built in the UK.

Cllr Adam Tolhurst is a member of the committee and the Labour representative for Milton Regis on Swale Borough Council. He explained: "We still don't know who the person who donated the money was, but without them we were going to have to scale down our plans to a cheaper and smaller design.

"It's not often anywhere in the country has a new memorial, so we are delighted.

"Fundraising had been the issue. Quite understandably, people have been giving any spare money they have to charities which can immediately help people. Our donor saved the day.

"What we really want now is to appeal to anyone who thinks their relatives were on the memorial to join us next month for the service."

However, the original copper plaque, rescued from the rubble of the destroyed memorial will not be returning.

It was moved to Sittingbourne with plans to return it when the new memorial was complete, but fears cold-hearted crooks would swipe it means the names will instead appear engraved on Welsh black slate instead.

"It looks stunning," explained Cllr Tolhurst. "It has been crafted in Portland Stone and is a fitting tribute to those who have fallen."

The memorial was designed and built by Elliott Brotherton, a well-respected stone mason who lives in New Romney, and has a studio in Rye.

■ Do you believe your loved ones may be named on the memorial? If so, email chris.britcher@archant.co.uk and we'll put you in touch with the memorial committee.

JAMES Bond legend Sir Roger Moore is heading to Kent next month as part of a promotional tour for his new book. The actor will be at Waterstones in Bluewater on October 13 at 3pm, signing copies of his book Bond on Bond. Moore played 007 for 12 years, starring in Live and Let Die; The Man with the Golden Gun; The Spy Who Loved Me; Moonraker; For Your Eyes Only; Octopussy; and A View to a Kill. He first found fame in the television series The Saint.

➔ Fewer victims of crime

CRIME in Kent has fallen for the sixth year in a row despite cutbacks in policing. Figures show there are 3,845 fewer victims of crime, with Kent Police achieving six of 10 performance targets. Violent crime, criminal damage and vehicle crime are down, and a record number of people are satisfied by the service. However, the authority missed its targets of overall policing satisfaction, an increase of the amount of crime and violent crime detected.

HEALTH

Brain bug warning to students

YOUNGSTERS flying the nest to embark on university courses are being urged to be on the look out for the potentially fatal brain bug meningitis.

The disease can be particularly virulent among those living in close proximity to other people, and can kill in less than four hours unless treated.

Parents and relatives are now being urged to ensure students are alive to the risks and make themselves aware of the symptoms, which are often overlooked as bearing the same hallmarks of a hangover or too many late nights.

Last week, thousands of students headed off to universities across the UK – including the numerous campuses in Kent – with many living in shared accommodation.

Teenagers and students are the second most at-risk group, behind children under five, and it is estimated 30 per cent of young people carry the organism which can spark meningitis.

Colum McGuire is vice president of welfare of the

BE SAFE: The MMR vaccination is recommended for students

Kent Union, the students' body for the University of Kent.

He explained: "When you have so many young people meeting from all over the world, it's bound to be more prevalent. The main issue is the symptoms are the same as a hangover, that's why it's important to get the message out. We put little cards in our welcome packs and we also get our radio station to go through the symptoms."

Signs include headaches, vomiting, feeling stiff, and a dislike of bright lights.

However, many students wait for a rash to appear before seeking medical attention, which can lower the chances of dealing with the disease successfully.

Chief executive of the Meningitis Trust, Sue Davie, said: "We urge everyone to familiarise themselves with the symptoms, trust their instincts and get urgent help if concerned. This could save a life."

Every year, 3,400 cases of meningitis are reported in the UK, killing 10 per cent of those with the disease.

Parents are also urged to check their child has had the MMR vaccination to eliminate the risk of an outbreak of mumps and measles.

The two viruses also frequently take hold in universities, and undergraduates are asked to check if they have been vaccinated.

Consultant in public health medicine for NHS Kent and Medway, Dr Faiza Khan, said: "Measles and mumps can spread rapidly and be very unpleasant. If they need the MMR vaccine, they should arrange this when they register with a doctor."

Community spirit brings home In Bloom trophies

By Chris Murphy

THE Garden of England has been showered with praise at the annual South and South East in Bloom.

Despite the efforts of the weather to wash away the enthusiasm of even the keenest gardeners, several areas took good prizes, including Tunbridge Wells with gold in the large town category.

The awards were announced in front of a packed crowd at a ceremony at Ferneham Hall in Fareham, Hampshire.

BBC TV gardener Chris Collins presented the main winners with engraved glass trophies, and gave certificates to all other entrants.

Organisers said the contest encourages residents and businesses to work together to improve their environment, making it greener and cleaner and a pleasure to live in, work in and visit.

Gravesend town centre won a silver gilt for the second time, and Gravesend council leader

GOLDEN: Dunorlan Park in Tunbridge Wells was one of the county's many In Bloom award winners

Cllr John Burden said: "Once again Gravesend has connected with its community, especially the business community, to produce an award-winning performance. Gratifying as the award is, never forget that the flowers brighten our town for everyone, resident and visitor. "Possibly it has never been a more important year to show the place at its best."

Tunbridge Wells won several awards and Cllr Ronen Basu said: "It is wonderful for the town to have been given these awards and confirms what people tell me when they say they think the town looks very beautiful. This is a prestigious competition and we should be proud of our achievements."

Ian Cameron-Fleming is senior outdoor leisure officer at Canterbury council, and he said: "The In Bloom campaigns are about recognising great gardening skills to make towns and cities attractive places to work live and visit, showing that people care about the environment, and more importantly getting people involved in looking after their environment."

"It is a delight for the district to have achieved these awards, in recognition of the local In Bloom campaigns, and in particular acknowledging individuals who put in a lot of work and effort to make it happen."

Government to levy foreign lorry tax at last – but we won't get a penny

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

DAMAGED roads, hellish congestion and lay-bys used as toilets – but still Kent won't see a penny of foreign lorry tax to help tackle ongoing problems on our roads.

In what is a slap in the face for Kent County Council, the Government has continually refused to agree to part with any of the £23 million expected to be generated by the incoming foreign haulier charges.

This is despite Kent bearing the brunt of foreign lorries, with 87 per cent of all international road haulage coming into the UK through Dover and the Channel Tunnel.

Newly appointed transport secretary Patrick McLoughlin announced that foreign lorry drivers using UK roads will be charged £10 a day in a bid to "level the playing field" for British hauliers.

Currently, those coming from overseas contribute nothing, while UK drivers must pay tolls on the Continent.

Foreign lorry drivers also fill up on cheaper fuel abroad.

County Hall chiefs welcomed the incoming charges, but demanded the Treasury invest some of the money back into Kent to repair roads and fund major transport projects.

KCC has long campaigned for the introduction of such a tax due to the continual damage to roads, lay-bys used as toilets and stopovers for drivers, and congestion caused by Operation Stack – when lorries are parked on the M20 during disruption at the ports.

Hundreds of crashes have also occurred over the years involving foreign lorry drivers.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter said: "We created the scheme to charge foreign lorries for using Kent's roads a number of years ago. At the moment they contribute nothing to the damage they cause."

"A significant amount of money can now be raised. But this additional income must be invested in maintaining and improving our road network."

"Kent currently suffers all the disadvantages of being the UK's main transport corridor to Europe but enjoys none of the benefits. We want assurances the extra revenue generated by lorry charging goes to fixing the damage caused by foreign trucks."

Cllr Carter said as well as maintaining the roads, the foreign lorry charge should fund key infrastructure improvements, such as a lorry park to solve the problem of Operation Stack; a third Thames Crossing; and improvements to the A2/M2 and M20.

The authority has also called for better facilities for drivers after horror stories were revealed earlier this year of drivers caught going to the toilet in people's gardens while parked up overnight by the A20 near Westwell in Ashford.

Draft legislation will be published next month, with the fees introduced before the next general election in 2015. Charges could amount to as much as £1,000 a year per vehicle.

Mr McLoughlin said the proposals will deliver a vital shot in the arm to the UK haulage industry.

"It is simply not right that foreign lorries do not pay to use our roads, when our trucks invariably have to fork out when travelling to the Continent."

"By introducing charges we will create a level playing field, increasing UK competitiveness and boosting growth."

The Treasury and Department for Transport told this newspaper there are no plans to hand any of the generated funds to Kent.

• For an opinion from Kent County Council's cabinet member for transport Cllr Bryan Sweetland on the issue, turn to page 32.

WELL FED:
Food lovers are certain to find something to tempt them at Broadstairs Food Festival

FESTIVAL

Tuck into a weekend of delicious food, drink and great live music

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THOUSANDS are set to descend on east Kent next month for the return of the popular Broadstairs Food Festival.

Opening on Tuesday, October 2, the gastronomic event promises an array of culinary treats and a food fair with more than 100 stalls lined up.

A gala dinner kicks things off at East Kent College's Bayside Restaurant, with students showcasing their cooking skills for diners.

As festival sponsor for the fourth year, the college is supported with produce supplied by Broadstairs High Street traders.

A three-day food fair festival in Victoria Gardens and Promenade is being held on Friday and Saturday, October 5-6 from 10am-6pm, and on Sunday, October 7 from 10am-5pm, with free entry every day.

The event is sponsored by Archant KOS Media, publisher of this newspaper.

Promising a long weekend of food and cooking demonstrations, visitors will get to sample some of the best of local and county produce.

New to the 2012 festival is a Teddy Bears' Picnic in the main food court marquee from 10am on the Saturday, with prizes for the oldest, smallest, cuddliest and best-dressed bears.

Last year more than 50,000 people enjoyed the festival, but organisers say there is even more on offer this year with more than 100 stalls to tempt visitors.

New offerings include freshly-seared scallops, pasta, and stir-fries from Globe and Rainbow; cocktails, canapés and loose-leaf teas; hot and cold food served all day; and the Farmhouse Pop Up Kitchen.

In partnership with Thorley Taverns, the festival is also offering a weekend of live music at The Broadstairs Pavilion.

Much-loved local band Hullabaloo will be performing on Friday, October 5, followed by X Factor star Ben Mills and his band on the Saturday night.

Doors open at 7pm and a wristband for the whole weekend is priced at £5, with proceeds supporting the festival, which is a community-funded event backed by residents and local businesses.

Visitors are invited to pop coins in the collecting buckets or to buy a lottery ticket to ensure the continuation of the family-friendly event.

CRIME

Convicted for web chat about child sex abuse

A GROUNDBREAKING legal case has seen a computer engineer sentenced to a suspended jail term after graphically describing the sexual abuse of children during a private online chat.

Gavin Morris Smith, 41, previously known as Gavin Seagers, from Boleyn Way in Swanscombe, became a legal first in Kent after a successful prosecution for online chat offences under the Obscene Publications Act. It was the first case involving online conversations that Kent Police has brought before the courts.

He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, suspended for two years, at Maidstone Crown Court, and received an order to be supervised by the Probation Service for two years. He was originally charged in 2010 with nine offences, committed in November, 2009, of publishing an obscene communication.

A trial at Maidstone Crown Court in November, 2011, saw the jury was discharged following legal arguments. However, this was successfully appealed by Kent Police and the Crown Prosecution Service in February this year.

It was agreed from the ruling at the Royal Court of Appeal in London that online chat could be included within the Obscene Publications Act. The case was returned to Maidstone Crown Court where, in July, Smith pleaded guilty to nine offences of publishing obscene material.

Det Insp David Shipley from the public protection unit at Kent Police said: "Smith was engaging in online chat, encouraging and minimising the issue of child abuse.

"As a result of this case, the Obscene Publications Act of 1959 can be used for online offences where people engage in such fantasy chat. These people should not consider themselves beyond the reach of the law."

TURBULENCE: London mayor Boris Johnson has angered many in Kent with his determined efforts to promote a new hub airport for the Thames estuary

CAMPAIGN

Boris's deputy heading to lion's den for airport visit

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

COUNCIL chiefs in Medway are gearing up for a meeting with Deputy Mayor of London Victoria Borwick who will visit next month to discuss the controversial Thames Estuary airport.

Ironically, the senior Tory, who was appointed in May, spoke publically last year in favour of a rail link between Heathrow and Gatwick – instead of a Thames Estuary airport.

"It will be interesting to see what her view is want to talk to Mrs Borwick and invite her to see the proposed sites for the airport, and see what her reaction is."

Last year, Mrs Borwick, a member of the Greater London Authority's transport committee and former Tory party treasurer, put forward a proposal for 'Heathwick' – a high-speed rail system linking the existing Heathrow and Gatwick airports.

Writing in a blog last year, she said: "Unfortunately we have put off a serious discussion about the inadequacies of our present airport provision for too long.

"We should have been confronting these strategic decisions years ago. Even radical solutions such as Boris Johnson's estuary airport – under present planning and legal regimes – could not be delivered in time to stop the slide against our competitors.

"Boris Island, a planned multi runway airport that would sit in the Thames Estuary, would take 25 years to deliver and cost £50 billion to construct. Lord Foster's Isle of Grain has a similar price tag and time frame."

now," said director of regeneration at Medway Council Robin Cooper.

"She's on record, before getting the (deputy mayor) post, of saying she was in favour of high-speed rail links to link up existing airports. We have a similar view to that."

Mr Cooper said the meeting with Mrs Borwick on Thursday, November 22, will see the authority outline the alternatives to a hub airport on the north Kent coast, explain the destructive impact it would have and take her on a site visit so she can see for herself the devastating effects such a development would have, not only on the environment but the people living there.

Her upcoming visit follows numerous attempts by Medway Council, some county MPs and Kent County Council to secure a meeting with London Mayor, Boris Johnson.

"We want to have a frank exchange of views on what the Mayor of London is proposing and also schemes he's supporting, such as Lord Foster's design," said Mr Cooper.

"It will be interesting to see which scheme the mayor is still backing and for us to get over the views of the people of Kent and Essex.

"We want to get the message across of the impact it will have. This isn't us being nimbys, this is the wrong place to build an airport.

"We're not anti-airports, but we believe there are alternatives to the Thames Estuary idea. We

CELEBRITY

'My new son-in-law Dermot has the X Factor'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

DERMOT O'Leary's new mother-in-law has spoken of her happiness at seeing her daughter wed her long-time love after 10 years together.

Deputy Mayor of Broadstairs and Thanet Tory councillor Rosalind Binks watched her TV producer daughter Dee Koppang walk down the aisle and marry the cheeky X Factor presenter last Friday.

The couple, who met while working at the same TV production company, tied the knot at the picturesque St Mary's Church in Chiddingstone, Sevenoaks, after a decade together. They were watched by family and a host of celebrity friends including Holly Willoughby, Fearne Cotton, James Corden, and Leigh Francis aka Keith Lemon.

"It went very well – like all brides' mothers I was stressed, but very happy," said Mrs Binks.

"It was an informal wedding; it was for friends and family only. All the people there were good friends and meant something to the couple.

"They looked very happy.

My daughter was beautiful."

Ms Koppang, 33, wore a stunning, vintage, fitted dress, and Mr O'Leary, 39, had a mid-night blue suit with a matching waistcoat and grey tie.

Mrs Binks, who lives in Broadstairs, said she was delighted at the nuptials.

"Dermot has been part of our family for the last 10 years and I couldn't wish for a better son-in-law," she said.

"To see your daughter married to someone you wholeheartedly approve of is what every mother wants. It was a very happy day."

Ms Koppang – who has a successful TV producing and directing career in England and America – will be known as Koppang-O'Leary.

She was born in Oslo, Norway, but as a young child she came to Ramsgate, where she attended St Stephen's infant school and then St Lawrence College.

"The wedding brought three nationalities together; Irish, Norwegian and British," said Mrs Binks.

The happy couple chose not to sell their wedding pictures and interviews to a magazine, as many other high-profile couples have done, and instead released a picture, inviting those who use it to donate to the RNLI Ramsgate and another charity in Colchester.

Guests of the wedding were also invited to donate to the charities rather than buy a present.

The newlyweds attended Gavin and Stacey star James Corden's wedding to fiancée Julia Cary the day after their marriage.

Mrs Binks said: "They've now gone on a mini-moon to Italy as Dermot starts back at work next week, but I'm sure they'll do something at a later date."

Popular presenter Mr O'Leary proposed to Ms Koppang on a romantic trip to New York last year.

Strike threat hangs over college as jobs to be axed

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

STAFF at K College are to be balloted over strike action in an increasingly bitter row over proposed job losses across its countywide campuses.

The college confirmed recently it planned to axe 145 jobs as part of an on-going review of its finances.

Just days later, it also confirmed it had shelved plans for an ambitious multi-million pound learning centre in Ashford town centre.

K College – formed by the merger of South Kent and West Kent colleges – has campuses in Ashford, Folkestone, Dover, Tonbridge, and Tunbridge Wells.

Now members of the University and College Union (UCU) are voting over whether or not to take industrial action.

The union says the college's plans leave the entire workforce of more than 1,000 staff at risk of redundancy. They add it also comes just months after 50 staff lost their jobs as part of a previous review.

It is now demanding the threat of compulsory redundancies is lifted and called for a "full transparent audit" of the college's finances.

UCU chiefs said the large number of job losses was "not justified" and pointed to other colleges' abilities to "deal with funding shortfalls without such drastic action".

The president of UCU, Kathy Taylor, met its members at the college earlier this week and urged them to back the strike ballot if negotiations fail.

UCU regional support official, Adam Lincoln, said:

"These ill-conceived and unjustified proposals, that mean the axe for around 200 members of staff in a single calendar year, will have huge ramifications in terms of the quality of education K College is able to deliver. We are not seeking confrontation, but we must defend the education service the college provides not just for now, but for the future."

A spokesman for K College said: "The college is committed to meaningful consultations with staff and unions."

"Since the merger in April, 2010, we have been going through a downsizing and restructuring process, and we are focused on taking forward a curriculum that offers the best quality courses in every case."

"Colleges are not able any longer to run courses that are not viable or appropriate in today's challenging jobs market."

"We are making savings across all areas, but our priority is to become and remain a top quality college."

COMPETITION

Win tickets to Champions of Rock at the Orchard Theatre

THREE giants of rock, on one stage, on one night – prepare to be “entertained, exhilarated, and rocked ‘til you drop” as Champions of Rock hits town.

The live concert show celebrating the music of Freddie Mercury and Queen also stars the world-acclaimed Rod Stewart and Tina Turner revue shows. And it takes place at Dartford's Orchard Theatre on October 12.

It's a chance to witness the sheer power of some of the greatest rock songs of all time on stage again. And you could be there for free courtesy of our great competition.

Michael Taylor, the show's producer, said: “Be prepared to be regally rocked; a crazy big thing called Champions of Rock is coming to town.”

Queen B, who re-create the magic of Freddie Mercury and Queen in the show, are supported by the equally explosive Tina Turner and Rod Stewart live concert shows.

Mr Taylor added: “Both specialise in whipping crowds up into a frenzy of audience participation. They both combine superb musicianship with audacious stage antics.”

To be in with a chance of winning one of the three pairs of tickets up for grabs, simply answer the following question:

Queen's legendary lead singer is called Freddie?

a) Flintoff b) Mercury c) Fox

Send your answer, along with your name, address and daytime contact number to: Champions of Rock Competition, Archant KOS Media, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Kent TN25 6SS. Closing date is October 2, 2012.

Winners will be randomly selected from all correct entries. The promoter's decision is final.

Usual terms and conditions (see www.kentnews.co.uk) apply. Please note if your entry arrives after the closing deadline of October 2, 2012, your entry will not valid. And if you don't win, tickets for the show are available from the theatre's box office priced at £22.50.

ROAD SAFETY

Speed traps take the credit for a big drop in serious road crashes

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE number of deaths and serious injuries in crash hot spots has reduced dramatically, according to the Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership.

New figures have shown a 72 per cent drop – from 363 people in the three years before fixed speed cameras were installed to 103 between 2009 and 2011.

Mobile cameras, which move around the county, have also helped cut deaths and casualties by 67 per cent, from 118 prior to them being introduced to 62 in the last three years.

Spokesman Katherine Barrett said in the 10 years the partnership has been running it has been determined to reduce the number of speed-related crashes.

"Our latest research clearly shows the benefit of safety cameras in casualty reduction is substantial," she said. "In real terms, fixed and mobile safety camera figures combined represent the equivalent of 386 lives saved, or people being saved from potentially life-changing injuries."

Across the county there are 77 fixed safety camera sites, all installed at specific locations due to a history of speed-related crashes in which people have died or been seriously injured.

"In the majority of areas, the message is definitely getting through to drivers, though there are still some where motorists are failing to heed speed warnings, and where fatal or serious injuries have remained the same or slightly increased," said Ms Barrett.

"We regularly review the effectiveness of cameras at these sites and continue to explore other ways of reducing speeds and casualties."

But Ian Taylor, Kent spokesman for the Association of British Drivers, said to attribute the reduction in crashes to speed cameras was "potentially dangerous".

"Overall, there has been a decrease in accidents, deaths and injuries. That is always welcome news," he said.

"But the drop is partially due to the economic downturn, resulting in less traffic. Statistics of this kind need to also take traffic volumes into account. There is also little attempt to correlate the figures with the actual causes of the accidents."

"Speed alone never caused any accident, death or injury – slower speed may mitigate the effects – but how far do you take that? Inappropriate speed for the road and conditions is a genuine cause, but is variable and little to do with a posted speed limit; set these days as much for political reasons as safety.

"Such accidents are a small minority. Many more are caused by inattention, failures of judgment and drink or drugs.

"All those reasons demand better education and training as well as enforcement. Why then do we continue to lavish so much money and effort on the camera partnerships and just one aspect?"

A new campaign has been launched this week by the safety camera partnership.

Information boards will be going up at roadside camera sites showing how many lives have been saved and serious injuries prevented so drivers can see how effective a particular camera has been.

SEARCH FOR WITNESSES

AN APPEAL has been launched after speed cameras were targeted by vandals placing stickers over their lenses.

Kent Police, community safety units, Neighbourhood Watch and the Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership are asking communities to watch for anyone carrying out such behavior and to alert authorities. Cameras across the county were targeted last month and it is now happening again.

Katherine Barrett from the camera partnership said: "We don't have the resources to keep undoing this damage.

"We're keen that cameras continue working in order to continue reducing the speeds for communities.

"Our eyes and ears can't be on the ground to look out for this, so please let the police know by calling 101."

SAFETY: Figures have dipped but those opposed to speed cameras say more needs to be done

Kent Life names its Garden of the Year green-fingered stars

ATTENTION TO DETAIL: Elizabeth Cairns of Knowle Hill Farm

By Sarah Sturt

sarah.sturt@archant.co.uk

LIFESTYLE magazine Kent Life hosted a special high tea party at Hadlow College to celebrate the achievements of the eight finalists in its Garden of the Year Awards.

Now in its third year, the finalists were joined by the judging panel – Roger Platts, Amanda Cottrell, Sarah Morgan, Leigh Clapp and the magazine's editor Sarah Sturt – at the college's design studio.

Others joining in the event included representatives from the college and the magazine's charity of the year – Hospice in the Weald.

Prizes of Ruxley Manor Garden Centre vouchers and personalised certificates were presented to the two runners-up in the Primary School Garden of the Year category, Hunton Primary School and Christ Church Junior School in Ramsgate, and also to the four runners-up in the Amateur Garden of the Year category: Barbara and Brian Badham, Victoria Granville and Richard Baxter, Mel and Lizzie Smith, and Paul and Sue Vaight.

WELL GROWN: Pupils at Hook Lane Primary School in Welling won the Kent Life schools category

Overall winners, the inspiring young gardeners at Hook Lane Primary School in Welling and Elizabeth Cairns of Knowle Hill Farm in Ulcombe – who edged the competition with her consistent attention to detail in plant selection and knowledgeable, enthusiastic personal connection to her creation – also received beautiful wooden benches from Sidcup-based Ruxley Manor Garden Centre.

The October edition of Kent Life is on sale now and includes four pages of photos and interviews with the two winners.

The November edition (on sale from October 24) will feature two pages of pictures from the awards ceremony.

HERITAGE

Family sparks international dispute over final resting place of Jewish philanthropist

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A MAJOR international row has blown up over the future resting place of one of Kent's best known Jewish families.

Financier, banker and philanthropist Sir Moses Montefiore built a mausoleum in Ramsgate 127 years ago to be the final resting place for him and his wife Lady Judith.

He died in 1885 shortly before his 101st birthday.

But now reports suggest some members of the Montefiore family want the remains to be moved to Jerusalem.

But Ramsgate Montefiore Heritage claims a move to Israel would be against his wishes.

Cllr David Green, is Ramsgate mayor as well as chair of the organisation.

He said: "The Ramsgate Montefiore Heritage protests most strongly against any proposal concerning the removal of Sir Moses and Lady Montefiore from their last resting place in Ramsgate, the place where they chose to be buried.

MAYOR: Cllr David Green

"Sir Moses frequently visited Palestine but never attempted to live there and nor did he state he wanted to be buried there. If Sir Moses had wanted to be buried in what was then Palestine, this presumably would have been arranged."

His wife and county councillor Elizabeth added: "I am really concerned. He had the mausoleum built because that's where he wanted his remains to be. It is a travesty to remove him. It is important someone's last wishes are respected."

Mayor Green said: "Sir Moses gave as much to the non-Jewish community as to the Jewish, especially in Ramsgate where he made his home, East Cliff Lodge, as well as building a synagogue and Rabbinical College. Throughout his life Sir Moses gave generously to charity and his centenary was celebrated throughout the town."

Even the mayoral chain of office was donated by Sir Moses. Cllr Green said: "We intend to resist all attempts to remove the remains of Sir Moses and Lady Montefiore from their final resting place. Sir Moses played an enormous part in the history of Ramsgate and gave so much to the town where his memory lives on."

The Jewish Chronicle has reported that distant relatives, historian Simon Sebag Montefiore and his wine expert brother Adam Montefiore, who lives in Israel, would like his remains moved. They want him interred next to the landmark Jerusalem Windmill, which Sir Moses built to break the Arab monopoly on flour and provide work for Jews.

They represented the family at the windmill's reopening ceremony, attended by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and the Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi of Israel, Yona Metzger, and claim they have political and religious backing.

Simon Sebag Montefiore told the paper: "I had a conversation with this Prime Minister and I told him that a lot of the family thought it was about time Sir Moses was brought back to Jerusalem."

He added: "In the 1970s Golda Meir and the then Israeli government consulted the family to see if Sir Moses could be brought back to Jerusalem, but they said no."

He claims it would be Sir Moses' "dearest wish" to be moved. Mr Montefiore told the audience at the windmill dedication: "Moses Montefiore loved Jerusalem, lived for Jerusalem, and made it our family motto."

"A Zionist before the word was invented, he believed in the sacred idea of Jewish return as a religious duty, and in Jewish statehood. He came seven times and I think he should return an eighth and final time."

CONTROVERSY: The remains of Sir Moses Montefiore are in a mausoleum he had built in Ramsgate for himself and his wife

ACCIDENT

Cyclist's funeral set for anniversary

THE family of cyclist Graham Hughes, killed in a car crash on the A228 last weekend, have revealed his funeral will take place on the same day he should have been celebrating his 29th wedding anniversary.

Mr Hughes, 56, was killed when his bike collided with a stationary lorry in Snodland on Saturday afternoon.

The father-of-two and grandfather was declared dead at the scene.

A statement from his devastated family said: "Graham would have been married to Julie for 29 years on October 1, which is also the date of the funeral, which will be held at Bluebell Hill crematorium. "Graham was a father to two children, Gary and Zoe, and was a grandad to seven-year-old Harry and three-year-old George. Graham was a great friend to many.

"He worked at Wincanton in Snodland for the last 23 years and died whilst on his way home from work.

"He was a keen and experienced cyclist, who had ridden many charity rides."

KENT REMEMBERED

STAND AND DELIVER: Horse-drawn carriages were popular targets for the county's highwaymen

The highwayman who became a folk hero

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE phrase "stand and deliver" is synonymous with an extravagantly clad masked horseman pointing his pistol at an unfortunate traveller and relieving him of their money and belongings.

And a few hundred years ago such men did indeed prowl the isolated country lanes of Kent.

Coaches and travellers on horseback were their prey, and while the use of militia and soldiers eventually brought an end to the exploits of the 'knights of the road' they have passed into legend and popular culture, from Dick Turpin to Adam Ant.

And among the most profitable targets were those rich enough to travel by stagecoach

A mail coach between London and Dover started daily operation in 1785, leaving the capital at 8pm and arriving in Dover at 6.30am in time for a daylight crossing to France.

Other towns also began to get the service, while coaching inns sprang up which offered night-time accommodation for passengers and driver, and a change of horses during the day.

Turnpike roads, paid for and maintained by local landowners who charged travellers to use them, made progress easier, but also attracted the highwaymen who were often tipped off by locals when rich pickings were on the road.

Records still exist of robbers who haunted the King's Highway during the 17th and 18th centuries. The confession of a Highway Robber under Sentence of Death in 1751, can be found in the Centre for Kentish Studies.

It reads: "I, William Lee, aged 22 years, husbandman, do depose... that I left my father on New Years Day last on account of a young woman, who I had been familiarly acquainted with, but unwilling to marry... (F)alling into bad company, (I) was seduced to take to the highway and committed about half a dozen robberies... (I) was apprehended... within one week... I dye in the Protestant Faith and... beg all young men would take warning by me, beware of bad company and Sabbath breaking".

John Nevison was one of Britain's most flamboyant highwaymen and much of his legend arose from one north Kent exploit which took place before the advent of stagecoaches.

One summer morning in 1676, a traveller at Gads Hill was robbed by Nevison.

The highwayman then made his escape on a bay mare, crossed the River Thames, by ferry and galloped towards Chelmsford.

After resting his horse for half an hour, he rode on to Cambridge and Huntingdon, resting regularly for short periods during the journey.

Eventually, he found his way to the Great North Road where he turned north for York.

He arrived in York at sunset after a journey of more than 200 miles, washed and changed his clothes, then strolled to a bowling green where he knew the lord mayor was playing.

Legend has it he then laid a bet on the outcome of the match – and made sure the lord mayor remembered the time the bet was laid – 8pm that evening.

Later, Nevison was arrested for the robbery, but produced the lord mayor as his alibi witness and the court refused to believe a man would have committed a crime at that time in Kent and ridden to York by 8pm the same day.

He was found not guilty and emerged as a folk hero, even impressing the king of England Charles II – but he was eventually executed for killing a man in a separate incident.

After his death the following song became popular:

*Did you ever hear told of that hero,
Bold Nevison it was his name,
And he rode about like a brave hero,
And by that he gained a great fame,
Now when I rode on the highway,
I always had money in store.
And whatever I took from the rich
Why I freely gave it to the poor.
I have never robbed no man of tuppence
And I've never done murder nor killed.
Though guilty I've been all my lifetime
So gentlemen do as you please.*

DASHING: John Nevison's deeds were legendary

Give us a fair share of lorry cash

While the news of plans to charge foreign HGVs for using our roads is to be welcomed – it is vital the money generated is fairly allocated

WHAT very good news it is to hear that the new secretary of state for transport has announced the Government is to go ahead and implement road-user charging for HGVs.

Kent County Council has long campaigned for such a charge and we are delighted the Government has, at long last, listened to our views.

Patrick McLoughlin, the transport minister, must be congratulated. Within a couple of weeks of taking up office he has managed to score a great win for British business.

Firstly, he is ensuring foreign lorry drivers pay to use UK roads, mirroring the situation for British trucks travelling on European roads.

Secondly, he has managed to comply with the ever-present and tiresome requirements of the EU regulators and thirdly, he has done all this without disadvantaging UK hauliers.

While foreign operators will have to pay up to £1,000 per year, the UK haulier charge will be off-set through reduced Vehicle Excise Duty.

All in all, a good day's work, and he should quite rightly be feeling pleased with himself.

However, I call on him now to acknowledge the vital role Kent plays as the gateway between the UK and Europe.

Kent has long suffered the impact of 90 per cent of all foreign HGVs entering the UK through our beautiful county. We all know what these impacts are: Congestion on our main routes; damage caused to our roads, lay-bys and country lanes; and who can ignore the massive disruption in the east of the county when Operation Stack is implemented when the French have an industrial dispute or we experience extreme cross-Channel weather?

With this recent announcement, Patrick McLoughlin needs to ensure that when he is overseeing the drafting of the necessary legislation to invoke this charge, there is clear provision for a proportion of the revenue raised to be reinvested in the county that is bearing the burden of 90 per cent of foreign HGV traffic. I hope he will fight the Treasury and insist some of this new tax revenue is returned to Kent.

Top of the list must be the provision of a number of suitable overnight lorry parks, together with a strict enforcement campaign to stop foreign lorry drivers parking in lay-bys on the A2 and A20, in local villages and other unsuitable and unsafe roads in our county.

I would like to share with KoS readers part of a letter that I received last week from a resident from just outside Canterbury; I have received hundreds of similar letters like this over the last year.

They said: "The use of the lay-by is disruptive to our lives.

I call on the transport minister to recognise the role of Kent as the gateway between the UK and Europe

Worst of all is the overnight lorry parking. Refrigerated lorries keep us awake all night. Non-refrigerated lorries leave engines on and disturb us in the middle of the night or early morning when they warm up their engines and accelerate up the hill.

"We have witnessed drivers urinating in the lay-by and worse. They throw rubbish into the bushes and we have been asked for food and drink as there is nowhere to obtain these. We have also had verbal abuse thrown at us when asking the drivers why they choose to park here and interrupt our sleep. Such drivers can become threatening and approaching them is very frightening."

Kent's residents really deserve better. Kent needs a fair share of the HGV road charging revenue.

KOS COMMENT

Worrying soaring cost of the final farewell

THERE are, they say, just two certainties in life; death and taxes.

But despite an economic outlook which promises as much warmth as an early British summer, few of us could imagine the cost of dying would be added to our list of financial concerns, along with fuel and food.

Amid the tragedy of a loved one's passing, the final bill for their burial or cremation has long been a bitter pill to swallow. Today it is one which is rapidly extending beyond the financial reach of many.

We cannot afford to live in a society where we cannot afford to die. And it is a depressing sign of the world we live in when an increasing number of people, in this modern 21st century, are placed in a pauper's grave.

Blooming marvellous

PRIDE in our communities is frequently the glue which holds us together.

And so we should all extend our congratulations to all of those towns, cities and villages in Kent that learned of success at the In Bloom competition.

Their efforts enrich all our lives and remind us we can all make a difference.

You're wrong on V1 and V2

IN HIS article of September 16, Chris Murphy has confused the V-1 and V-2 weapons used by the Germans in the closing stages of World War Two.

The V-2, or Vengeance weapon 2, was indeed a rocket-propelled bomb, but it was not the precursor to the Cruise missile.

The V-2 was actually, as the article later states, the forerunner to the ballistic missile and the space rocket.

The V-1, variously called by the Allies the buzz bomb or doodlebug, was the precursor of the Cruise missile.

The V-1 was a small pilotless plane powered by a ram jet engine which was halfway between a jet and a rocket engine. These were the missiles which some Allied pilots tried to tip over with their wings. This was to avoid flying through the debris if they managed to detonate the explosive it carried.

As the article states, the V-2 travelled at three times the speed of sound and fell almost vertically.

There was no defence against it once launched, even the sound of its approach was only heard after the impact.

Success must breed success

YOUR readers will be aware that Team GB in the London Olympics came third with 29 golds, 17 silver, and 19 bronze medals – a total of 65 medals; and ParalympicsGB were equally successful with a total of 120 medals.

The principle here for our athletes and Andy Murray's recent success at the US Open in tennis, is 'the will to win'.

It is important the legacy of the Games is to have more young people taking part in competitive sport at school.

Schools play a pivotal role in encouraging and identifying potential future Olympians, that's why the Government has set up the 2012 School Games competition.

But more young people taking part in competitive sport can't be driven by top-down Whitehall policies, as we have seen previously; it must be led by parents and communities creating a culture where competitive sports can thrive.

We must all be proud of the achievements of our Olympic medalists like Ashford rower Tom Ransley winning bronze at the men's eight final in rowing and William Fox-Pitt, from Canterbury, who won a silver medal in the Olympics three-day eventing.

I want to see the legacy of the London Olympics in the form of a sustained and continued participation of competitive sport by future generations and continued success for Team GB and all British sports people.

I would be interested to receive your views on Olympic legacy via email to richard-james.ashworth@europarl.europa.eu.

Airport would create jobs

I REFER to the article by MP Mark Reckless on September 9, and am amazed at his negative tone. He seems to be more proud of the projects he has helped to retard rather than those he has promoted.

His wide-ranging solution to the airport problem seems to be based on a sprawling network of road links spread throughout the South East, plus a series of rail links clogged up with air passengers humping their luggage on and off trains.

His arguments seem to be impervious to the environmental disaster to the people and countryside of the South East that would be caused by the increase in passenger volumes at Birmingham, Heathrow and Stanstead, plus the greater risk of aircraft collisions.

The bill for the extra runways, infrastructure, compensation and disruption may even outweigh the cost of an airport at either Cliffe or in the Thames Estuary itself.

Kent is desperate for permanent jobs. Meanwhile our politicians and pressure groups focus on the effects on wildlife, forgetting to mention the effects of wind farms on the hunting and fishing habits of wildlife they care so much about, to the detriment of future generations.

While they balk at the prospect of large projects, Essex is getting on with building a huge container port on the site of an old oil refinery, thus providing south Essex with a large employment boost.

We've fought animal exports

WHEN the live animal export trade re-started at Ramsgate Port in May, 2011, we were in opposition at Thanet District Council (TDC).

We expressed our repulsion of the trade by putting a motion to council to seek all legal avenues in order to stop it.

This motion was agreed unanimously. This was our first victory.

When Labour became the ruling administration of TDC we vowed that we would continue the fight against the live export trade, using the legal framework and showing a zero tolerance of any infringement of the animal welfare regulations.

Our rigorous action and determination meant the lorries were inspected very thoroughly, as they should.

It then became apparent that on several occasions the lorries or the animals were unfit for further travel.

This led to our decision as TDC Cabinet to suspend the trade in live animal exports out of Ramsgate Port on the grounds that it does not have adequate facilities to care for the animals and that there is no control post nearby to take them.

The Government, as the competent authority under the EU Regulation 2005/1, is responsible for setting up such a control post but, so far, they have not complied with this requirement, in spite of a promise they made in July, 2011.

The suspension of this awful trade by the Labour administration of TDC shows we take our responsibility seriously and that we are not afraid of taking the necessary actions, using the legal framework to pursue our aims.

We stood for election on our manifesto which stated that we would defend the rights of animals.

We fought for this to happen when we were in opposition and we are delivering now that we are the ruling administration.

We would like to thank the RSPCA for the professional and persistent way they carried out their difficult duties at Ramsgate Port.

Your business is our business

Ladies snap up opportunity to show their idea to MPs

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A PAIR of entrepreneurs from Folkestone have the chance to showcase their unique business idea at this year's Conservative Party conference.

All the Fun Of The Children's Fair will be taking a stand at the October event in Birmingham after being chosen from thousands of other new companies.

Entrants from across the UK were invited to enter the Start-Up competition, with 12 finalists given a chance to discuss their ideas in front of senior Conservative politicians, company representatives and members of the national media.

Launched by business partners Kay McLoughlin and Katie Bouille, All The Fun Of The Children's Fair caters for anything related to children, from bouncy-castle hire, fashions and catering to party entertainers. It aims to bring them all together in one place to show what they have to offer, attracting an audience of people with young families who want to examine a range of child-focused products and ideas.

McLoughlin said: "We entered the Start-Up competition after talking to Damian Collins, our MP, because we saw it as a great opportunity for our business idea to gain exposure, credibility and contacts."

The idea came to the two women, who are both mothers, when they realised there was a gap in the market for a business that brings all sorts of child-related activities together.

"We are pretty sure no one else has thought of anything quite the same," said McLoughlin.

"It's a little like a wedding fair in some respects. We will bring together all sorts of people who run businesses relating to children and put them in the same room. Party entertainers can showcase their skills – a fashion show could involve high-street stores and local children, while we would invite toy-manufacturers and photographers, too.

"There are a lot of mums who work, maybe at home, doing something for children, which would be able to get a far wider exposure. Our first idea is for an event in Folkestone, at The Grand Hotel, then maybe elsewhere in Kent. We have even looked at cooperation across the Channel as Folkestone has such strong links with Boulogne."

The pair have already put their idea to the BBC3 TV show Be Your Own Boss, and while they didn't win they say it gave them confidence.

Bouille said: "We have been talking for about a year and now we have launched the company. Currently we are working from home and trying to get everything right. I know there are craft fairs and baby shows, but I think we have hit on something unique."

START-UP: Katie Bouille and Kay McLoughlin will attend the event

The Start-Up competition is sponsored by companies such as Fujitsu and the British Venture Capital Association.

Prime Minister David Cameron, who launched the competition, said: "I want to encourage businesses to create and innovate, to invest and grow, to develop and break boundaries."

"That is why I'm proud the Conservative Party is once again showcasing the best of British innovation and entrepreneurship at our conference through the Start-Up Hub."

Focus on finance at annual seminar

SPECIAL seminars to help and advise company directors working within commerce will once again be set up to help business chiefs across Kent.

Accountancy and financial service firm Reeves, which operates across the South East, is offering free half-day sessions to financial controllers.

The Finance Focus seminars have been running for more than 10 years and offer an ideal opportunity to update directors' knowledge on subjects including tax-saving opportunities, bank funding, corporate financial planning, financial reporting, restructuring and recovery and recent changes in employment legislation.

Clive Stevens, managing partner at Reeves, said: "Our annual Finance Focus seminars outline important changes for your business in a wide range of areas and provides an opportunity to speak to our partners."

"In this economic climate you must keep on your finances, so if you are responsible for the finances of your company please do come along."

The seminars are being held in Canterbury, Maidstone, Gatwick and London. See www.reeves.co.uk/events for further details and to book.

DEVELOPING OPPORTUNITIES: Rocksalt restaurant on the waterfront is considered a major success in the regeneration work

Regeneration continues with harbour bid

AN application for the development of Folkestone harbour has been submitted to Shepway council.

Put together by architect Sir Terry Farrell, it forms part of former Saga boss Roger de Haan's proposals to regenerate that area of the town.

Included are up to 1,000 new homes, shops, bars and a sports centre. More specific details will be made available in the future.

The proposal replaces an earlier scheme that was abandoned due to the economic climate. Put together in 2006, this called for 1,400 homes, a fast-ferry link to France and a vastly-improved marina.

This is the latest development in the regeneration of Folkestone, which has seen substantial investment in The Old High Street and Tontine Street.

The Creative Foundation has overseen an arts-led scheme that has attracted new businesses, with many connected to media, communications or culture.

Despite the recession, the scheme has continued over recent years and been regarded as a success, with one of its main steps forward being the establishment of the critically-acclaimed Rocksalt restaurant on the waterfront.

EMPLOYMENT

SUPPORTER: Hugh Robertson

Fair focuses on all jobhunters

THE Swale Jobs Fair hosted by MPs Gordon Henderson and Hugh Robertson will take place at the Wyvern Hall on Wednesday (September 26) from 10am to 5pm.

The event will be open to anyone looking for a job, career change or apprenticeship opportunities.

Local businesses Swale Heating and Shepherd Neame have already confirmed their support as sponsors for the event and will also be participating as exhibitors, along with more than 40 other companies offering more than 400 jobs.

Although aimed at adult jobseekers, the event will also be keen to engage with school-leavers to help them formulate an achievable career plan and a number of the secondary schools are expected to attend.

There will also be an opportunity for anyone looking to start up their own business to talk with a team of experts within the business and financial sectors at the business start-up clinic; it is hoped that many hopeful entrepreneurs will visit the event.

Henderson said: "There are 3,000 unemployed people in Sittingbourne and Sheppey. Many of those people want to work and I think that as their MP it is my responsibility to try and help them find a job."

"I believe that reducing the level of unemployment is critical because doing so will not only benefit individuals but also our wider community."

Robertson added: "I am delighted to support Swale Jobs Fair, which is a fantastic opportunity to generate local jobs for local people and brings many of our employers together with jobseekers as well as students entering the job market."

"I am also keen to support Kent County Council and DWP's Youth Contract initiatives."

Social enterprise cash a benefit to communities

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Kent Big Society Fund has made its first cash available to boost two socially-aware businesses looking to the future.

Turner Cars from Westgate-on-Sea and Herne Bay's Beach Creative are the first recipients of loans from the fund, which supports enterprises that benefit the community.

Turner Cars provides community transport to a number of vulnerable groups, with a specific focus on wheelchair-carrying vehicles.

Beach Creative provides space to artists and delivers a range of free or low-cost creative workshops for the community and schools to promote and develop the creative sector in Herne Bay.

Established with initial funding from Kent County Council, the fund is managed by the Kent Community Foundation.

Carol Lynch, Foundation chief executive, said: "It is fantastic that this loan fund for social enterprises is available, particularly in an economic environment where banks are potentially reluctant to lend. With loans of between £10,000 and £100,000 being considered to social enterprises on bespoke terms, we can support all size of venture from those starting up to others which are well established."

The cash comes primarily as a loan fund, but there is some scope for an element of grant-funding, from which both of these first two successful applicants have benefited.

Mike Hill, KCC cabinet member for customer and communities, said: "We are delighted the first loans have been made to two very worthy start-up social enterprises."

"The aim of this fund is to make it easier for these types of businesses to apply for and secure funding. I hope other similar organisations are encouraged to apply so we can continue to support and celebrate this excellent work in Kent communities."

The companies said they were looking forward to making the best use of the cash.

Gillian Wilson, of Beach Creative, said: "We are absolutely thrilled to get this. We put a lot of work into developing our application with Andy Garrett, of Kent Community Foundation, and feel confident that with the bonus 20 per cent element of grant funding we should comfortably be able to pay back our loan over the required terms."

"It enables us to deliver courses for the community and to build confidence in practical skills. Our monthly repayments will keep us focused on delivering this professionally."

Scott Dumigan, from Turner Cars, said: "The bank manager was not interested in our proposals to purchase and maintain two wheelchair-adaptive vehicles to help us develop the transport side of our organisation."

"With flexible terms from the Kent Big Society Fund, an element of grant-funding to cover the up-front admin fee, as well as the supportive relationship we have had, we are now able to provide low-cost, good-quality, reliable transport to all aspects of the community."

"This will allow our clients to access areas such as health, education and social opportunities, which they currently find difficult. As an organisation we are here for community benefit, not for profit."

TOURISM

ATTRACTION: Turner Contemporary in Margate

County tourism put on the map

WORK has started on development of Culture Kent, a new website promoting the best events the county has to offer to boost its tourism potential and attract greater investment.

A partnership of Visit Kent, Arts Council England, Kent County Council, Canterbury City Council, Canterbury Christchurch University, The Marlowe Theatre and Maidstone Borough Council is developing the site with the aim of communicating how much is happening, and is about to happen, in Kent.

"The county has so much to offer in terms of culture, and the aim of this new site is to showcase that to as wide an audience as possible," said Sandra Matthews-Marsh, chief executive of Visit Kent. "We are looking to promote the county as a cultural destination and encourage visitors to stay longer, so attracting greater investment in tourism."

With funding from Arts Council England, the site is being used as a pilot programme to establish best practice for cultural organisations that want to work with tourism promoters to reach new audiences across the UK.

"Kent is seeing an exciting growth in arts, culture, regeneration and tourism, and we hope this site will benefit potential audiences – for residents, visitors, as well as arts and cultural organisations. We think the Visit Kent website has the potential to be a model for other places, in joining up tourism and cultural opportunities," said Jon Pratty, digital and creative economy, South East, Arts Council England.

The site is due to launch in March 2013.

Make the most of young talent

COMPANIES across the county need to take on new talent to prosper and give opportunities to young people, says a UK employers' group.

The Financial Skills Partnership is calling on employers in Kent to invest in the future of their businesses by bringing on the next generation of businessmen and women.

The Office for National Statistics has published its latest set of Labour Market Statistics, which detail the level of unemployment across the country. According to the figures, the number of those out of work in Britain has fallen by 7,000 to 2.59 million.

But at this time of year graduates across the country are entering the job market and, as a result, there will be increased pressure to create vacancies.

The FSP, the employer-led body for the financial-services industry, has created an innovative new route into the finance sector for unemployed graduates through its Graduate Foundation College. The FSP is calling for more firms to join them in this approach and invest in future talent.

This month, the Graduate Foundation College will start putting bright unemployed graduates through a concentrated, structured

NEW BLOOD:

The Financial Skills Partnership is encouraging firms to take the most of young talent

10-week training programme that major employers such as Aviva, Just Retirement and Scottish Widows have helped provide, ensuring its quality and industry relevance.

Successful graduates will then enjoy six months of paid industry experience with a small or medium-sized advisory firm.

The graduates will be trained up to the first module of the regulated investment advice competence qualification before being introduced to the advisory firms.

Liz Field, partnership chief executive, said: "This initiative will be hugely beneficial to small and medium-sized businesses. These graduates can be the new blood needed to lower firms' age profile, the talent to meet new regulatory requirements and the creative catalysts to help businesses grow. We're inviting small firms to register and gain the benefit of enthusiastic recruits."

"Vocational training is the obvious and effective way to build skills and we provide the first steps towards professional qualifications."

"Small and medium-sized advisory firms stand to benefit most from this scheme by tapping into the framework put in place by larger employers."

"In a sector where skills are at times scarce and sought-after, the faster this and other initiatives are taken up, the sooner the sector as a whole will be able to expand."

George is flying high after landing Biggin Hill role

A NEW apprentice scheme for young people has been launched by the RAS group of companies at Biggin Hill Airport. The company specialises in the design and manufacture of aircraft interiors, exterior painting and finishing, and special engineering projects, for the aerospace industry.

Under the scheme, three apprentices will be taken on over the next 12 months, and the first to be enlisted is 20-year-old George Harvey following a thorough selection process.

He joins this month and will be attached to the company's design department under the supervision of head of design Kevin Hann. He will be trained in aerodynamics, thermodynamics, and computer-aided design.

As part of his training, George will attend Bromley College over three years on day release to study mechanical engineering.

After completing the course and passing the examinations, he will qualify for a BTEch in mechanical engineering in 2015.

George said: "It is a privilege for me to be appointed to this position. The future is very exciting as aerospace is such a dynamic industry."

"I have always been fascinated by aircraft and the science of aviation. If I work hard, there is a good career path – for me it is a dream come true."

George lives in Medway and is a former pupil of the Medway Community College, now the Bishop of Rochester Academy. He then attended MidKent College to study public services.

The second apprentice will be recruited in the autumn for employment commencing in January, 2013, to specialise in aerospace engineering and manufacturing.

The third candidate will be selected in summer 2013 and will start work in August to specialise in aircraft refurbishment.

Courses are the Tonic needed for creative people

THE University for the Creative Arts says more than 650 creative entrepreneurs, businesses, and individuals in Kent have benefited from its short courses.

Tonic Creative Business Project, based at UCA Rochester, has offered 30 different courses since 2008 and launched its new portfolio for the upcoming academic year this week aboard LV21 at Gillingham Pier.

From October, creative people will be able to apply for short courses and workshops in entrepreneurship, web design, photography, and other creative subjects, which will take place in the evenings or weekends at UCA's Joiners Shop, at Chatham Historic Dockyard.

Michael Poraj-Wilczynski, widening participation manager at UCA, said: "Tonic has been a great success over the past four years and provides a unique opportunity for people to improve their skills and working lives."

"Our short courses offer so much to so many people: not only do they cater for individuals looking to retrain and enter the creative industries for the first time, but there are also courses for established creative enterprises who want to learn more about business and marketing, while practical workshops, such as photography, are perfect for those who simply want to learn more about their creative passion."

College teams up with Gills to develop football coaches of the future

MIDKENT College has teamed up with Gillingham FC in an attempt to develop the football coaches of the future.

Students from the Medway campus's sport department will shadow the League Two club's Football in the Community team as they deliver a number of training schemes across the towns.

The youngsters will also have the opportunity to observe academy, reserve and first-team training sessions at the club throughout the football season.

MidKent College sport lecturer William Lee said the partnership was part of a new course pathway aimed at helping students gain employment in the football industry through refereeing and FA coaching qualifications.

He added: "I'm very excited about this opportunity and believe it will give students a first-hand insight into how the football industry operates."

"We have previously operated courses based around the playing aspect but have decided to deliver this partnership from a new angle."

Students on the scheme attended a special launch event at the home of Gillingham FC – Priestfield Stadium – on Thursday, September 13.

Also in attendance at the launch were Gillingham midfielder Jack Payne and club

Adam Lawrence – head of Football in the Community at Gillingham FC – said: "The GFC Community Trust is delighted to announce this partnership with MidKent College, which will see young students volunteering for the scheme and gaining important experience in football coaching."

"Not only will this be a benefit for the community team by having extra coaches at our sessions, but I am sure the students will benefit from working in a variety of environments alongside some experienced coaches and teachers."

"It is important for us as a charitable trust to forge links with local organisations and build strong relationships in our community, and this exciting partnership with our neighbouring college is further evidence of this."

Youngsters offered food for thought in successful Skills for Work Week

THE Co-operative Food has been staging workshops in the Dartford area as part of a national scheme to encourage young unemployed people into the food industry.

The business was backing Feeding Britain's Future – Skills for Work Week, a nationwide campaign that finished on Friday, and aimed to offer young unemployed people opportunities to help them prepare for the workplace and introduce them to the various roles within food retail and manufacture.

As part of the campaign the Co-operative hosted sessions at its food stores in Station Road, Longfield, and Long Lane, Bexleyheath, for around 80 young unemployed people.

During the workshops they received training in the skills they need to help them secure jobs, such as creating a CV and interview techniques, as well as learning more about the different types of jobs in food retail and what the work entails.

Group chief executive of the Co-operative Group, Peter Marks, said: "With youth unemployment escalating to more than one million, businesses have a real responsibility to tackle the issue."

"We all have a part to play, and by supporting this initiative and investing in young people, we can help provide them with the confidence and knowledge to make the most of the employment opportunities that are out there, helping to create a talented workforce for the future."

"The Co-operative is committed to helping young people into work, through schemes such as our Apprenticeship Academy, which is on track to provide 2,000 apprenticeships for young people by 2014. The scheme offers proper jobs with nationally recognised qualifications and genuine career prospects throughout our group of businesses, from food and farming through to logistics, right across the UK."

Feeding Britain's Future – Skills for Work Week was designed by food and grocery experts, IGD, to bring together businesses from the entire food and grocery industry to play a vital role in tackling youth unemployment.

Academy opens arts faculty doors to adults for free taster sessions

FOLKESTONE Academy's performing and expressive arts faculty is offering adult members of the community an opportunity to experience the academy's facilities and teaching resources in four one-hour free taster sessions.

These sessions will be held on Monday, September 24, from 3-5pm at the Folkestone Academy.

Andrea Wood, head of expressive and performing arts and organiser of the outreach project, said: "I am excited to share our fantastic performing arts facilities and teaching expertise with members of the community."

"We all feel very passionate about working with the adult members of the community as well as our students because they may have never had the opportunities to study such subjects with amazing facilities when they were at school."

All of the staff from the faculty will be collaborating to deliver four one-hour taster sessions called:

1 – Storytelling with music for parents and toddlers

2 – Dance fever, a hip way to keep fit

3 – Sound and lighting for beginners

4 – Music technology for beginners

If you are interested in participating in one or all sessions call 01303 842400 to sign up. Places will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis.

Search starts for best young cooks in Kent

THE prestigious young people's cooking competition – the Kent Young Chef Award – is underway as dozens of schools and hundreds of students prepare to compete for the coveted Junior and Senior titles in the 2012 competition.

Kent Young Chef Award 2012 is open to all secondary students in Kent in year groups 7-11.

The Produced in Kent inspired competition gives Kent's aspiring young chefs the opportunity to devise and write an original main course dish that features regional and seasonal ingredients from the Garden of England.

Two-times champion Alice Browning, of Walderslade Girls School in Chatham hopes to one day compete on MasterChef: The Professionals, work with Kent celebrity chef Richard Phillips, and then run her own restaurant.

She said: "For anyone who loves cooking from scratch I would really encourage you to enter this competition. I have always dreamed of becoming a professional chef one day and this competition is just the best accolade an aspiring young chef could hope to achieve in Kent."

The authors behind the eight best paper entries will head to the professional kitchens and restaurant at K College, Tonbridge, on November 23 to compete for the Junior and Senior titles in the live final in front of a panel of judges headed up by Richard Phillips.

All eight finalists will walk away with a

HR student Becky in line for award after volunteer work at staff group

A BROMLEY College student studying human resources has been chosen as a finalist for an important industry award.

Becky Shailer, 25, is shortlisted for the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development's 2012 Outstanding Student Award in recognition for her work as HR information analyst at Kent County Council.

Becky is one of five finalists and studied for the Level 5 Intermediate Certificate in Human Resource Management at Bromley College, which she completed in July.

It was her hard work volunteering as the co-chair of Kent County Council's younger persons' staff group, Aspire, that brought her to the attention of the judging panel.

Using the skills and knowledge gained from her course, Becky managed a consultation and re-launch of the staff group to meet the needs of young colleagues, and is currently responsible for more than 20 projects which she manages in addition to her day to day role.

She said: "I am really excited to have been shortlisted for this award; it's fantastic to be recognised as I am incredibly proud of my achievements with Kent County Council's staff group."

"I have always been passionate about HR, but I'm now even more excited about my HR career. I am determined to continue with my studies and complete the next level of the CIPD qualification."

The winners will be revealed at a black-tie event in central London on October 17.

(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

To allow a programme of carriageway resurfacing works to be carried out, Kent County Council intends to make an Order to restrict traffic on various roads in Kent, as shown below.

The Order will become effective on or after Monday 8th October 2012 for up to 3 months, or until the works have been completed.

The planned dates and times for each road closure or restriction are shown below, in a Schedule listed in alphabetical order of District.

Planned dates will be indicated by signage displayed on site 14 days in advance. Road closures and other restrictions will be in effect when the appropriate signage and barriers are in place.

Every effort will be made to keep to the schedule shown below. Some minor modifications may be made to dates and duration of works, to be advised once known.

Adverse weather conditions may prevent some works being carried out on the planned dates.

Roads that are missed will be re-scheduled, as advised locally and signposted on site.

PLANNING

FORM OF NOTICE SPECIFYING LAND AND STATING EFFECT OF GENERAL VESTING DECLARATION THE DISTRICT COUNCIL OF SHEPWAY (LAND AT DUNSTALL LANE, ST MARY'S BAY) COMPULSORY PURCHASE ORDER 2011

of:

- Notice is hereby given that the District Council of Shepway ("the Council") on 13 September 2012 made a general vesting declaration under section 4 of the Compulsory Purchase (Vesting Declarations) Act 1981 ("the Act") vesting the land described in the Schedule to this notice ("the land") in themselves as from the end of the period of 28 days from the date on which the service of the notices required by section 6 of the Act is completed.
- The Council will in due course tell you the date on which the service of the notices was completed.
- The effect of the general vesting declaration is as follows:
- On the first day after the end of the period referred to in the first paragraph of this notice ("the Vesting Date") the land, together with the right to enter upon and take possession of it, will vest in the Council.
- Also, on the Vesting Date the Acts providing for compensation will apply as if, on the date on which the general vesting declaration was made (namely 13 September 2012), a notice to treat had been served on every person on whom the Council could have served such a notice (other than any person entitled to an interest in land in respect of which such notice had actually been served before the Vesting Date and any person entitled to a "minor tenancy" or a "long tenancy which is about to expire". These expressions are defined in Appendix A to this notice).
- If the land includes any land in which there is a minor tenancy or a long tenancy which is about to expire, the right of entry will not be exercisable in respect of that land unless, after serving a notice to treat in respect of that tenancy, the Council having served on every occupier of any of the land in which the tenancy subsists a notice stating that, at the end of a specified period (at least 14 days from the date of the service of the notice) they intend to enter upon and take possession of the land specified in the notice, and that period has expired: the vesting of the land will then be subject to the tenancy until that period expires, or the tenancy comes to an end, whichever happens first.
- Schedule 1 to the Act contains supplementary provisions as to general vesting declarations. These provisions are set out in Appendix B to this notice.
- A copy of the general vesting declaration to which this notice refers and of the plan annexed to the declaration can be inspected at the Civic Centre, Castle Hill Avenue, Folkestone, Kent CT20 2QY (tel: 01303 853000 and may be seen during their normal opening hours and are also placed on its website at www.shepway.gov.uk.
- Electronic copies of the Order as confirmed by the Secretary of State and of the map referred to will be provided upon request. Please contact the Legal department at the Council (email: estelle.culligan@shepway.gov.uk) to request copies.

SCHEDULE LAND COMPRISED IN THE ORDER
AS CONFIRMED
LAND TO BE ACQUIRED

- All interests in Dunstall Lane, other than those of the acquiring authority and any adjoining owners rights, on the plan outlined in red and delineated number 1 on the plan annexed to the said Order.
- All interests in the land known as land on the West Side of Dymchurch Road St Mary's Bay outlined in red and hatched red and delineated number 2 on the plan annexed to the said Order.

APPENDIX A COMPULSORY PURCHASE
(VESTING DECLARATIONS) ACT 1981

2. Interpretation and construction

- "minor tenancy" means a tenancy for a year or from year to year, or any lesser interest.
- "long tenancy which is about to expire", in relation to a general vesting declaration, means a tenancy granted for an interest greater than a minor tenancy, but having on the Vesting Date a period still to run which is not more than the specified period (that is to say, such period, longer than one year, as may for the purposes of this definition be specified in the declaration in relation to the land in which the tenancy subsists).

In determining what period a tenancy still has to run on the Vesting Date it shall be assumed:

- that the tenant will exercise any option to renew the tenancy, and will not exercise any option to terminate the tenancy, then or thereafter available to him; and
- that the landlord will exercise any option to terminate the tenancy then or thereafter available to him.

APPENDIX B COMPULSORY PURCHASE (VESTING DECLARATIONS)
ACT 1981
SCHEDULE 1 - DIVIDED LAND PART I BUILDINGS AND GARDENS ETC.

- In This Part of this Schedule-
"notice of objection to severance" means a notice under paragraph 2(1) below, "land proposed to be severed" means land in respect of which notice of objection to severance is served.
- (1) If a general vesting declaration comprises part only of-
(a) any house, building or factory, or
(b) a park or garden belonging to a house, any person who is able to sell the whole of the house, building, factory, park or garden may by notice served on the acquiring authority require them to purchase his interest in the whole.
(2) Except as provided by paragraph 10 below, a notice under this paragraph shall not have effect if it is served more than 28 days after the date on which notice under section 6 of this Act is served on the person giving notice under this paragraph.
(3) Section 8(1) of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 (which makes other provision for objection to severance of buildings, gardens etc.) shall not apply to land in respect of which a general vesting declaration is made.
- Where notice of objection to severance is served within the time allowed in accordance with paragraph 2(2) above then notwithstanding section 8 of this Act-
(a) the interest in respect of which the notice is served shall not vest in the acquiring authority, and
(b) if he is entitled to possession of the land, the acquiring authority shall not be entitled to enter upon or taken possession of it, until the notice has been disposed of in accordance with the following provisions of this Schedule.
(1) Within 3 months after a person has served on an acquiring authority a notice of objection to severance, this authority shall either-
(a) serve notice on him withdrawing the notice to treat deemed to have been served on him in respect of his interest in the land proposed to be severed, or
(b) serve notice on him that the general vesting declaration shall have effect, in relation to his interest in the land proposed to be severed, as if the whole of that land had been comprised in the declaration (and in the compulsory purchase order, if part only of that land was comprised in that order), or
(c) refer the notice of objection to severance to the [Upper Tribunal] 1 and notify him that it has been so referred.
(2) Sub-paragraph (1)(a) above has effect notwithstanding section 7(3) of this Act.
- If the acquiring authority do not take action in accordance with paragraph 4 above within the period allowed by that paragraph then at the end of that period they shall be deemed to have acted in accordance with sub-paragraph (1)(a) of that paragraph.
- Where in accordance with paragraph 4 or paragraph 5 above the notice to treat deemed to have been served in respect of a person's interest in the land proposed to be severed is withdrawn, or is deemed to have been withdrawn-
(a) that interest shall not vest in the acquiring authority by virtue of the general vesting declaration, and
(b) if he is entitled to possession of that land, the acquiring authority shall not be entitled by virtue of that declaration to enter upon or take possession of it.
- Where an acquiring authority take action in accordance with paragraph 4(1)(b) above, the general vesting declaration (and, where applicable, the compulsory purchase order) shall have effect as mentioned in that subparagraph, whether apart from this Part of this Schedule the acquiring authority could have been authorised to acquire the interest in question in the whole of the land proposed to be severed or not.
- (1) Where in accordance with paragraph 4(1)(c) above an acquiring authority refer a notice of objection to severance to the [Upper Tribunal] 1, and on that reference the Tribunal determines that the part of the land proposed to be severed which is comprised in the general vesting declaration can be taken-
(a) in the case of a house, building or factory, without material detriment, or
(b) in the case of a park or garden, without seriously affecting the amenity or convenience of the house, paragraph 3 above shall thereupon cease to have effect in relation to that notice.
(2) In making a determination under this paragraph in any of the cases in sub-paragraph (1)(a) or (b) above the Tribunal shall take into account not only the effect of the severance but also the use to be made of the part proposed to be acquired and, in a case where the part is proposed to be acquired for works or other purposes extending to other land, the effect of the whole of the works and the use to be made of the other land.
- (1) If on such a reference the [Upper Tribunal] 1 does not make a determination in accordance with paragraph 8 above, the Tribunal shall determine the area of that land (being the whole of it or a part of it which includes the part comprised in the general vesting declaration) which the acquiring authority ought to be required to take; and the general vesting declaration shall have effect, in relation to the interest in that area of the person who served the notice of objection to severance, as if the whole of that area had been comprised in the general vesting declaration, whether apart from this Part of this Schedule the acquiring authority could have been authorised to acquire that interest in the whole of that area or not.
(2) Where sub-paragraph (1) above applies, and part of the area determined by the [Upper Tribunal] 1 was not comprised in the compulsory purchase order, the general vesting declaration shall have effect as mentioned in that sub-paragraph as if the whole of that area had been comprised in the compulsory purchase order as well as in the declaration.
- (1) Where in accordance with paragraph 2(1) above a person is entitled to serve a notice of objection to severance, and it is proved-
(a) that he never received the notice required by section 6 of this Act to be served on him, or received that notice less than 28 days before, or on or after, the date on which the period specified in the general vesting declaration expired, and
(b) that a notice of objection to severance served by him was served not more than 28 days after the date on which he first had knowledge of the execution of the general vesting declaration, that notice shall have effect notwithstanding that it is served after the time allowed in accordance with paragraph 2(2) above has expired.
(2) Where in the circumstances specified in sub-paragraph (1) above, a person served a notice of objection to severance after the end of the period specified in the general vesting declaration,-
(a) paragraphs 3 and 6 above shall not have effect in relation to that notice.
(b) paragraph 4 above shall have effect in relation to that notice as if sub-paragraph (1)(a) of that paragraph were omitted,
(c) paragraph 5 above shall have effect in relation to that notice with the substitution, for the words "sub-paragraph (1)(a)", of the words "sub-paragraph (1)(b)", and (c) paragraph 8 above shall not have effect in relation to that notice, but without prejudice to the making by the Tribunal of any such determination as is mentioned in that paragraph.

Part II - RENTCHARGES AND TENANCIES

- (1) Where land specified in a general vesting declaration is, together with other land not so specified, charged with a rentcharge, such proportion of the rentcharge as may be apportioned under section 18 of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 to the first-mentioned land shall, subject to sub-paragraph (3) below, be treated as having been extinguished by virtue of Part III of this Act on the vesting of that land in an acquiring authority under that Part.
(2) Where by virtue of sub-paragraph (1) above a portion of the rentcharge is treated as having been extinguished, the provisions of section 18 of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 shall have effect as if the extinguishment had taken place under that section.
(3) If, in the circumstances described in sub-paragraph (1) above, the person entitled to the rent charge and the owner of the land subject there to enter into an agreement to that effect, the said section 18 shall have effect as if, at the time of the vesting of the land in the acquiring authority under Part III of this Act, the person entitled to the rentcharge had released that land from the rentcharge on the condition mentioned in subsection (2) of that section; and in that case no part of the rentcharge shall be treated as having been extinguished as regards the remaining part of the land charged therewith.
(4) In this paragraph "rentcharge" has the same meaning as in section 18 of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965.
- Where land specified in a general vesting declaration is, together with other land not so specified, comprised in a tenancy for a term of years unexpired, section 19 of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 shall have effect in relation thereto as if for references to the time of the apportionment of rent therein mentioned there were substituted references to the time of vesting of the tenancy in the acquiring authority.

IMPORTANT: These Conditions contain an indemnity if You breach Your warranties to Us.

- 1.1. These Conditions apply to any advertisement which You have asked Us to publish on Your behalf in a Title (the "Advertisement") and by making such an offer (an "Order") You agree to be bound by these Conditions in that respect.
- 1.2. These Conditions override any terms stipulated by You on order forms or otherwise. We accept these terms in writing. If we do not, these Conditions will apply except to the extent that they are inconsistent with anything so agreed by Us.
2. Definitions
 - "We" and "Us" means, and "Our" refers to, the Company which is the publisher of the Title in which You have asked Us to publish Your Advertisement.
 - "Title" means any publication or Website which We publish.
 - "You" means, and "Your" refers to, the person placing the Order with Us and where that person is an advertising or other agency placing the Advertisement on behalf of their client that agency agrees that it has placed the Order as principal.
3. Order
 - 3.1. We may insist on You submitting Your Order in writing and if We do so You will not be deemed to have placed an Order until We receive it in writing. If We do not insist that You submit Your Order in writing it is deemed to be placed when the initial Order is made, subject to the terms and conditions below. If You deliver copy instructions to Us, it may be treated as an Order unless it is clearly marked as "not constituting an Order".
 - 3.2. We will notify You if We do not accept Your Order within 3 working days of receiving it. Publication of the Advertisement will mean We have accepted the Order.
 - 3.3. We are not obliged to accept Your Order or to publish any Advertisement placed by You and cannot guarantee insertion in a special position, the date or the classification of any such Advertisement, or the distribution of the Title. We will not be liable for any loss or damage incurred as a result of Our failure in these respects. We may reject any Order (in whole or part) prior to (any) publication by notice to You and (to the extent rejected) We will not be responsible in that case but will have no further liability.
 - 3.4. We may carry forward an Advertisement not inserted to the next suitable issue of a Title.
 - 3.5. If You place an Order but fail to provide copy/artwork by the publication deadline, We may repeat any previous relevant Advertisement from You in which We have copy, or use a filler, and charge You the full price of Your Order in each case.
4. Advertising standards, legal obligations and third party rights
 - 4.1. You confirm and warrant to Us that the copy You provide and the publication by Us of an Advertisement pursuant to an Order will:
 - be legal, decent, honest and truthful;
 - not result in a breach of any relevant Code of Practice, including other provisions of the Advertising Standards Code of Practice
 - not infringe any legislation;
 - not be defamatory;
 - not infringe any copyright, trademarks or other legal rights of any person or company and that You have received any consent needed to refer to or portray people (expressly or impliedly) in the Advertisement.
 - 4.2. When appearing on any Archant Website will not contain hyperlinks or metatags linking to the advertiser's own Website unless express prior permission has been granted by Archant.
- 4.2. You agree:
 - to indemnify Us in respect of all costs, damages and other charges we incur or to which We are subject as a result of publication of any Advertisement pursuant to Your Order where there is a breach of any warranty given by You to Us;
 - not to be in breach of contract in relation to the Order/Advertisement;
 - that We may sub-reproduce and distribute copy relating to any Advertisement, including by electronic means;
 - that We may without notice or warning destroy any box office correspondence or communication received in response to an Advertisement which We think it inappropriate to deliver;
 - that We accept no liability in respect of any loss or damage alleged to have arisen from the forwarding or omitting to forward replies to box numbers to the advertiser (however caused)
 - that We may liaise with the police and/or any other relevant authority in relation to any Order/Advertisement or any response to any of them We receive (including passing on Your details);
 - that We may record and use for four details to perform Our obligations under these Conditions and publish Your Order/Advertisement (including by passing them to other group companies and/or sub-contractors as reasonably necessary to do so):

- If you are an agency acting for a client, that We may provide a proof of the Advertisement direct to the client for approval by whatever means We deem appropriate;
- that We may hold Your details on record for a reasonable period and contact You about future advertising opportunities which We believe may be of interest to You;
 - that any material submitted by You is held by Us at Your own risk and should be insured by You against loss or damage from what ever cause. We reserve the right to destroy without notice all such property after the date of its last appearance in an advertisement unless You have given written instructions to the contrary.
 - that You acknowledge that We shall have no liability for any variation of up to 10% in the final published size of any advertisement.
- Cancellation
- We are not obliged to accept a cancellation request (which We may require to be made in writing). All magazine cancellations must be made in writing a least one calendar month prior to the publication date. All other cancellations should be made within four working days of publication.
- We will accept a cancellation for part of a series of Advertisements, We may charge You for any insertions in that series which are not cancelled.
- Artwork
- We retain copyright (and any other intellectual property rights) in all Our artwork, copy and other materials in any Advertisement (even if combined with any of Your copyright materials). In addition, You agree that We own the copyright in the typographical arrangement of the text of any Advertisement. No copy in any form will be returned unless agreed in writing by Us at the time of placing the Order.
- We will not be liable for accidental loss or damage to Your copy, including artwork and photographs, in any format. Accordingly, Our liability for non-accidental damage to Your copy will be limited to the value of the medium in which they are embodied.
- Errors, omissions or inaccuracies in Advertisements
- We will not be liable for:
- any error (including but not limited to spelling and text errors), misprint, inaccuracy or omission in Advertisements, a proof of which has been agreed by You;
 - any error (including but not limited to spelling and text errors), misprint, inaccuracy or omission in an Advertisement, if that error is notified to Us more than one week after its publication;
 - any error (including but not limited to spelling and text errors), misprint, inaccuracy or omission in a second or subsequent Advertisement in a series;
 - any error (including but not limited to spelling and text errors), misprint, inaccuracy or omission in an Advertisement which does not detract from the essence of that Advertisement.
- Where We acknowledge an error (including but not limited to spelling and text errors) misprint, inaccuracy or omission We will, at Our choice, either publish the corrected Advertisement, or issue You a credit note for the value of the price of the Advertisement concerned and this will be the limit of Our liability in respect of the error, misprint, inaccuracy or omission.
- Payment
- Except where We state otherwise, all prices are exclusive of VAT. You will pay for an Advertisement on placing an Order, unless credit terms have been agreed. You will be sent an invoice unless You are a company or a direct debit arrangement is in place), in which case You will only be sent an invoice if You request one.
- Credit terms are that payment is due seven days from the date of invoice, unless You apply for, and We grant, a monthly account.
- A query on an item on an invoice issued by Us will not affect the time at which You are liable to pay the rest of that or any other invoice issued by Us.
- If You do not pay a sum due to Us by the due date, all sums due by You to Us will be payable on the due date for the sum not paid and we may suspend further advertising for You and charge You compensation and interest according to the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998.
- Applicable Law
- Nothing in these conditions shall exclude or limit Our liability for death or personal injury caused by Our negligence, for Our fraud or for Our liability to incur a criminal liability (if illegal to do so).
- These Conditions shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of England and Wales.

ROYAL MYSTERY

Is this the lost tomb of legend?

Nick Ames discovers what could be the grave of Richard Plantagenet

AS DNA tests take place on the newly-discovered remains that could be those of King Richard III, we can reveal that a long-lost tomb in the Kent countryside may be the last resting place of his son – a man who could have ruled the realm but for one battle.

In the grounds of a ruined church near Ashford, a grave inscribed with the words “Richard Plantagdnnet 1550” lies, covered in the ivy of ages, by the shores of a lake.

Romantic legend has long associated Eastwell Manor with the last survivor of the family of King Richard, who is reputed to have lived his life in anonymity after his father's defeat by Henry Tudor at the Battle of Bosworth in 1485.

Ironically, red roses, the emblem of Henry, now blossom close to the picturesque burial site in beautiful countryside close to the Pilgrims Way – a far cry from the possible burial place of his father, the defeated monarch, under a Leicester car park.

The story of Richard – a man who, although illegitimate, could have been King of England – was first written down in a letter in 1733 by a man named Thomas Brett, a collector of myths and legends. Roaming the Kent countryside, he encountered the following tale...

In 1545 the Lord of the Manor, Sir Thomas Moyle, was supervising building work when he noticed a quiet elderly man called Richard.

While the other workmen drank or played dice, he read a book. While this was unusual for a man of his class at the time, more astonishingly, the volume was in Latin, the language of clerics and royalty.

Sir Thomas questioned the old man and discovered that originally Richard had no idea who his parents were and had been brought up by a schoolmaster. But every so often a distinguished-looking stranger would ride into the estate and check on his progress. Then, when Richard was in his mid-teens, the mystery man arrived and asked him to go on a journey.

The two rode to a camp filled with knights and men-at-arms preparing for battle and were taken into an ornate pavilion. The young man was then presented to a person in authority who is reputed to have said: “I am your father. If we win tomorrow's battle, I will acknowledge you and provide for you. But if I am captured or killed, we will not meet again and for your own safety you must never speak of this.”

Presumably bewildered, the young Richard reputedly replied: “Who are you, sir?”

“Today I am Richard, King of England. Tomorrow, who knows?” was the reply.

The following day, Richard died on the battlefield and his son retired into anonymity to become a stonemason's apprentice on the estate where he had been brought up.

Hearing the tale, Sir Thomas honoured the man who could have been his king by having a cottage built for him – this is now long gone. After Richard's death, he provided the tomb.

The initial account was contained in a book published in 1735 by a man named Francis Peck and entitled Desiderata Curiosa.

The parish register of Eastwell contains an entry that states: “Rychard Plantagenet was buried the xxij day of Desember, Anno ut supra.” Next to the name is a mark believed to denote a person of aristocratic birth. The Latin phrase, which means “In the year above”, refers to the 1550 at the top of the page and there is no suggestion the document is a fake.

The register itself is believed to date from 1598 and be the work of the vicar of the time, Josias Nicholls, who copied entries from existing documents after a church order across England that all records be copied into vellum books.

The original register no longer exists and the copy is now part of the National Archives.

Richard himself is said to have died at the age of 81 and the story was kept in circulation by members of the Finch family, who took over the estate.

In 1861 a scholar named John Heneage Jesse investigated the reign of a man who was then regarded as one of the greatest villains of English literature, courtesy of William Shakespeare, who was writing at a time when King Henry's descendent Elizabeth I was on the throne.

Heneage's Memoirs of King Richard III states: “Anciently, when any person of noble family was interred at Eastwell, it was the custom to affix a special mark against the name of the deceased in the register of burials. The fact is a significant one, that this aristocratic symbol is prefixed to the name of Richard Plantagenet. At Eastwell his story still excites curiosity and interest... A well in Eastwell Park still bears his name (there is no corroborating evidence for this); tradition points to an uninscribed tomb in Eastwell Church (the name has been concealed in the past through overgrown vegetation) as his last resting place; and lastly, the very handwriting which, more than three centuries ago, recorded his interment is still in existence.”

St Mary's Church, Eastwell, is a ruin and a sign on its walls states it is in the care of The Redundant Churches Trust, with the land still consecrated. The nave is destroyed, but the tower and some walls remain.

According to a work entitled Kent Churches, published in 1954, the building fell into disrepair after damage during the Second World War and when the roof collapsed in 1951 much of the glass and fabrics were taken to other places of worship.

Some of the stonework and tombs were taken to the Victoria and Albert Museum and put into storage after being declared to be of historical significance. But, oddly, the Richard Plantagenet tomb was left in situ.

The Ricardian, a magazine dedicated to all things Richard III, reaches the conclusion: “It is true to say though, that there is no evidence that the full legend is true. There is also none that it is untrue.”

YOUR PETS

Think of others this Christmas time

AS Boy George and Bono once sang, "In our world of plenty, we can spread a smile of joy, put your arms around your pet at Christmas time." Or something along those lines.

There is no point avoiding the subject – Christmas is on its way and all we can do is plan for its imminent arrival... jingling bells and all.

It is always around the holiday season that the old slogan "a dog is for life, not just for Christmas" rears its snowflake-covered head, but this year let's go beyond that seasonal reminder and give man's – or woman's – best friend a little extra yuletide thought.

If you're planning to head off for a short break to see family elsewhere in the UK or are lucky enough to squeeze in a Christmas skiing holiday, don't just leave the feline with the neighbours.

There are options to send your furry friend on a holiday of its own to a loving home at a cattery in Kent where it will receive loving care during your winter break.

If you're not in the habit of getting away at Christmas, and the family pet really is centre of attention, why not go the whole hog and get a portrait done of your loved ones?

Animal-photographers have become incredibly popular in the Garden of England and offer an amusing and original gift idea for family and friends.

Pets are a big part of our lives in the UK and their well-being can be a concern, especially during the Christmas period when you may be unable to reach a vet during bank-holiday times.

A good idea is to book a check-up with your veterinary service before the Christmas season takes full effect and avoid any costly problems during the holiday period.

Just remember that a warm, loving home is appreciated by animals just as much as us humans, even if you choose to debate whether "they know it's Christmas time at all?".

A carnivore's dream but fight any temptation to bite the waitress

BREAKFAST might be the most important meal of the day for us Brits, but that shouldn't mean dinner is dismissed as a routine necessity.

If anything, it should be savoured, with the day's stresses behind you and the chance to just stop and wind down.

It certainly shouldn't be rushed and – if we take a leaf out of our Continental neighbours' book – it should be seen as a social occasion.

So, to be sat in a restaurant at 10.30pm with the distinct feeling you're holding up the waitress – from either going home to bed or perhaps hitting the town with friends – is not good. Especially on a Friday night.

The Sixty Six Steakhouse is a great restaurant. One stropky waitress shouldn't tarnish its reputation and the rest of the waiting staff and the owner were friendly and attentive, even to the point of giving me a tour of the new establishment. And it is lovely, with smart décor, a rustic clay oven and paintings from a local artist on the walls. The menu is also packed with great dishes – a carnivore's dream.

I chose the scallops with black pudding, horseradish potato purée and mustard sauce and my guest the whitebait with salad and ciabatta. Both were delicious and the scallops perfectly cooked. For our mains we chose the rack of ribs with a mustard sauce and 10oz ribeye steak with a peppercorn sauce.

These days, it seems to be all about plates of barely-there food – artistic creations no more than the size of your palm using exquisite ingredients costing more than the waiting staff.

So it was a treat to see a plate of food that would test Desperate Dan. The sight of the glistening ribs in sticky sauce was glorious, as was my guest's huge steak. Our plates of meat came with side orders: onion rings, fondant potatoes, vegetables and thrice-cooked chips.

The portions were slightly on the small side for the price of £3.20 each and the chips were more greasy than crunchy, but the meat was so delicious that all was forgiven.

At this point, it was getting on to about 10.30pm, not that late for a Friday night.

Our friendly waiter from earlier was replaced by another, who didn't seem impressed when we asked for the dessert menu. We ignored this and chose the Sixty Six Mess – a delicious bowlful of calorie-busting 'mess', full of cream, raspberries and other delights mixed together in a bowl... far from refined but tasty.

My guest chose the white-chocolate cheesecake. Now I love salty food, absolutely adore it, but this was far too salty. We needed a coffee to wash down the delicious/salty desserts, but this was not appreciated by our new waitress, who practically huffed as we placed our order. OK, so it was closing on 11pm, but we'd sat down late to eat. Our meal at The Sixty Six Steakhouse was delicious minus the salty cheesecake, and the atmosphere lovely minus the surly waitress. The bill came to £72.

Calling all young chefs – your time has come

THE longest-running young-people's cooking competition in the county, the Kent Young Chef Award, gets under way this autumn as hundreds of students prepare to compete for the coveted junior and senior titles of 2012.

The award is open to entry from all secondary students in Kent in year groups 7-11, giving aspiring young chefs the opportunity to devise an original main-course dish to serve two people that features regional and seasonal ingredients.

Visit www.producedinkent.co.uk to download an entry form and check the details.

The closing date is Friday, November 2, with the final taking place at K College on Friday, November 23.

Keep taste of summer with a top strawberry

CANTERBURY soft-fruit-grower Paul Kelsey of Kelsey Farms brought his award-winning and aptly-named Jubilee strawberries to the Marks & Spencer store in Whitefriars shopping district for a free tasting session.

Mr Kelsey, whose farm is at Wickhambreaux, concentrates on growing the Jubilee variety of strawberry due to its great taste, shape, colour and texture. He is convinced that Jubilee strawberries are the best available on the market today.

For those who love great-tasting Kentish strawberries, the good news is that they will be in shops until the end of September.

EATING OUT

Winter in mind for picturesque Elvey Farm

SET deep in the Kent countryside, the boutique hotel and restaurant of Elvey Farm makes a statement... you instantly realise that this is somewhere special.

Tucked away on a medieval farmstead, Elvey is made up of a cluster of buildings centred on a beautiful 16th-century barn overlooking sunny hills in the summer months, but it really comes into its own during the winter – and especially on the run-up to Christmas.

The log-fire crackles away in the bar, the restaurant is decked out in traditional Christmas garb, the frost glistens in the surrounding fields and the smells from the kitchen are too tempting for words.

Open seven nights a week for evening meals, Elvey celebrates everything Kentish. Lamb comes from the sheep on a neighbouring farm; game from the fields; and fruit and veg from local suppliers. Everything is fresh, home-made and hearty. The team has launched a lunch menu with a reasonably-priced table d'hôte menu from Wednesday to Sunday.

Elvey Farm is now taking bookings for Christmas parties for groups of eight to 40 people throughout December, with Christmas lunches at £15 for three courses and Christmas dinners at £28 for three courses.

ROARING SUCCESS: The Red Lion is offering its new 'Kent-only' menu three nights a week

New season, new menu at the Lion

THE Red Lion is a picturesque 14th-century pub on the green in the small village of Hernhill, near Faversham.

Shrouded in history, the pub still contains many original features. The popular watering hole and restaurant offers a selection of traditional English food alongside the frequently-changing seasonal specials.

Facilities include an upstairs restaurant, available for dining and large functions, as well as a front patio overlooking the beautiful church and village green.

There is also a well-established pub garden with many historical features and a large play area for children and families to enjoy.

The team is known for its traditional Sunday roast, at which diners can choose between one course at £10.50, two at £13.50 or three courses at £15.50.

You can choose from a selection of meats served with all the trimmings. Sunday lunch runs from noon until 9pm.

There is a busy steak night on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, with good deals on offer, while there is also a pensioners' special every Wednesday lunchtime.

The à la carte menu is served daily from Monday through to Saturday from noon to 2.30pm and 6pm-9pm.

The team has now also opened its new Taste of Kent-themed restaurant upstairs in the newly-refurbished restaurant area.

The new menu sources all of its produce from within a two-mile radius of the Hernhill pub, excluding fish, which is landed at Ramsgate harbour.

The Taste of Kent menu is available on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and booking is advised if you're to guarantee a table.

There are also varied events for everyone at The Red Lion, including a psychic evening on Thursday, October 4, starting at 7pm. Look out for the weekly yoga classes every Monday evening from 8.30pm.

There will be plenty of live music on Sundays during the run-up to Christmas.

Across the county

Dancing to a new beat... but Mama still brings the tea

MAMA Feelgoods is well known for its home-made cakes and afternoon teas at its boutique café in Bekesbourne and recently-opened café at Quex Park, Birchington.

But now the team is planning to restart that old-fashioned tradition of a tea dance. Owner Maddie said: "At our café at Quex we have a lovely chandelier-lit dining room and it will make the perfect space for this."

"Quex Park held a vintage fair earlier this year and we had a swing band in the room – and visitors couldn't resist having a dance."

Although the tradition of afternoon teas is largely remembered only by our octogenarians, Mama Feelgoods hopes to attract people of all ages. Mama is already in the early stages of planning this and would like people to register their interest on the Mama Feelgoods Facebook site and offer any advice.

One of the things she wants to know is if people would like to start by running some dance-classes first or whether there are plenty of bodies out there just wanting a regular place to move their feet.

If you would like to register your interest, either visit the award-winning fine-food store and café at Bekesbourne or the newly-opened boutique café at Quex Park, or email info@mamafeelgoods.com.

Both sites are open for breakfasts and lunches and specialise in handmade cakes and afternoon teas. Where possible, only Kentish produce is used in Mama's ingredients.

Get a true taste of India at the Vinodhon

MANY diners at the Vinodhon Tandoori restaurant in Hythe already enjoy their hospitality, their comfortable surroundings and, above all, the food.

What diners may not know is that they are enjoying mainly Bangladeshi food (virtually all 'Indian' restaurants serve Bangladeshi or Bengali food), which differs greatly from true Indian cookery.

The Vinodhon restaurant is proud to announce that from Friday, September 21, it will have a five-star professional chef, Mr HR Khan, preparing authentic Indian cuisine.

Mr Khan has more than 25 years' experience at a five-star hotel and is a professionally-trained and qualified chef, specialising in the art of Indian cuisine.

He has been working for more than 16 years with international-standard five-star Oberoi hotels – India's largest five-star group of hotels – and brings his wealth of skill and knowledge to the popular Vinodhon restaurant.

Diners will be able to experience authentic

Indian fish, duck and seafood dishes to suit all tastes, as well as many other fabulous meals from Mr Khan. However, regular diners to the Vinodhon will still be able to order their favourite dishes as well.

The restaurant is open from midday to 2.30pm and 6.30pm-11.30pm every day and even offers a special banquet night every Tuesday evening.

Watch out for the special Thali night, which will soon have a regular slot on Sunday evenings. It is believed to be the first Thali evening available in the county.

So pop into the Hythe restaurant and sample the spices and flavours of the true taste of India.

HATE LIMESCALE? SAVE YOUR HOUSEHOLD OVER £700 A YEAR

NEW INDEPENDENT RESEARCH

Recent research has shown that water softeners increase efficiency of water heaters such as boilers, hot water cylinders, washing machines and shower units by up to 24% equating up to £700 every year and can save households up to 70% on washing detergents, shampoos and cleaning products (not to mention the time and hassle of doing all the cleaning!). Water Quality Research Foundation Study (March 2011)

100% GUARANTEED TO REMOVE LIMESCALE SCUM

EWT water softeners are guaranteed to remove 100% limescale scum from shower doors, shower taps and stop washing machines, shower heads and kettles from clogging up – and all in just 2 weeks. If you are not completely happy we offer a 30 day NO QUIBBLE money-back guarantee. Why not make your life easier and healthier by ensuring:

- Your family's sensitive skin is protected
- Hassle free cleaning – no need for endless scrubbing
- No more clogged shower heads or ugly limescale scum
- Reduced water heating costs by saving energy
- Cleaner clothes and dishes
- Great drinking water

EW TECHNOLOGIES AT CUTTING-EDGE

Award winning EWT is one of the UK's leading providers of water treatment equipment with over 60,000 people depending on EWT every day. EWT is continually breaking new ground in the industry by developing cutting-edge systems to deal with today's water treatment issues.

READ WHAT OUR CUSTOMERS SAY

"I have had problem with limescale for years. It has destroyed numerous appliances, kettles and I have even had boiler problems due to excessive limescale build up. Since I had my EWT water softener installed I have had no limescale build up at all, and I no longer have the weekly chore of cleaning the shower heads, taps and bath of hard water residue. I have wanted to get a softener for years but the price has always put me back. EWT do great offers and provide a great service so I recommend them to anyone. If you're thinking of getting a water softener go ahead and do it, you won't be disappointed as they pay for themselves!" - Robert Woollard, Tonbridge, Kent

"We had our water softener and free $2000 drinking filter tap fitted about three months ago and the water taste is so much better. We now have no more limescale build up on taps in kettle shower head and the shower cubicle is much cleaner. We are very impressed with our EWT water softener and would recommend them to anyone!" - Robert Edge, Canterbury Road, Ashford, Kent

"Since having my EWT water softener installed I have noticed the water quality get much better, and the overall experience from my first call through to the installation was faultless. The main areas I notice the improvement is on my taps. I used to have a continuous stream of white limescale gathering around my taps and I'm so glad that it has completely gone. I have noticed my kettle is no longer scaling up which I am also happy about." - John Thomas, Grosvenor Road, Ashford, Kent

Taking samba to the beach Brazil style

Turner Contemporary, Margate

September 2012-March 2013
01843 233000

BRAZILIAN artist Maria Nepomuceno's new installation Tempo para Respirar or Breathing Time will take place in the dramatic double-height Sunley Gallery at Turner Contemporary.

The pieces will bring the energy and colour of Brazil, with its culture, carnivals and dramatic rainforests. Inspired by South American craft techniques, the artist weaves and sews straw, string and coloured ropes into draping coils and flower-like forms.

These materials form a fantastical landscape populated by playful ceramic shapes, shiny over-sized beads and found objects. Visitors can sit amid the work's many colours and textures, hearing the sounds of Nepomuceno's imaginary universe or just relax in a hammock looking out over the sea.

FOLLOWING success with his show The Slutcracker last year, the king of comic poetry Tim Key is back on tour once again, but this time he has brought Masterslut with him.

Still spouting words everywhere, Key has recently cropped up in comedy broadcasts Newswipe, Cowards and We Need Answers. He has also appeared as Alan Partridge's simple sidekick on the Mid Morning Matters internet radio shows.

The comedian won The Edinburgh Comedy Award for his 2009 recital of Slutcracker and was nominated for a Bafta in 2008. His late-night poetry programme on Radio 4 has turned heads in recent times, making him hot property on the UK comedy circuit.

Warm wartime tunes Hits from the Blitz

THE feel-good 1940s show, as featured at Dame Vera Lynn's Charity Gala Nights, heads to The Granville Theatre with the Hits from the Blitz gig.

Wartime tunes and sing-along songs are brought to life by the vocalists and multi-instrumentalists of the Five Star Swing band, featuring Simone Smith from the latter days of the Ivy Benson Orchestra plus Chris Smith (Jnr), composer and arranger for Glenn Miller's Brother, Herb and the BBC Radio Big Band.

Clients have included Blenheim Palace, Kew Gardens, Chelsea Flower Show, The Savoy Hotel, Imperial War Museum, Grosvenor Hotel, and The Treasury. Tickets £12.

www.theastor.org

FOR a decade there was only one name on everyone's lips when it came to original and creative comedy, Phil Cool.

With award-winning series and specials for both BBC and ITV, the legendary rubber-face man was the toast of television. Programmers, directors and producers vied for his signature and acceptance.

But it has now been almost 20 years since Cool has been seen on our television screens with Cool It and it is time to renew acquaintance as the comedian takes up his new Battle Against Ageism tour, which heads to The Astor Theatre in Deal next month.

There will be plenty of gags, funny faces and wacky wit from a comedy legend.

Property market stays constant in summer of Olympics and Jubilee

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ACTIVITY in the UK housing market was fairly stable during August despite the distraction of the Olympic fortnight and the Jubilee celebrations, according to the latest housing-market survey by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors.

However, future predictions are not optimistic – surveyors are gloomy about the rest of the year, with 13 per cent expecting further drops in house prices.

In the three months to August, chartered surveyors sold on average 7.5 per cent of the homes on their books per month.

Although this figure is lower than in many previous years – especially those before the economic situation became downbeat – the proportion of sales to stock has remained relatively consistent throughout 2012.

RICS says that in spite of this, with the Olympics having taken centre stage in the summer, the amount of potential buyers looking to view property saw a slight dip. A net balance of 9 per cent of surveyors reported falls in demand.

Alongside this, the number of new instructions was effectively unchanged on July. With the amount of fresh supply coming on to the market having remained relatively stable so far this year, surveyors report that sales are progressing where vendors are realistic with their asking prices.

Looking ahead, chartered surveyors across the country predict transaction levels to pick up slightly, with 12 per cent of respondents expecting sales to rise rather than fall over the coming three months.

The same cannot be said for future prices, however, with 13 per cent expecting further drops.

"Little changed in the housing market last month," said RICS spokesman Ian Perry. "The Olympics didn't have any real impact on the proportion of sales going through. The amount of people looking at property fell slightly, but, generally speaking, demand held up well."

Overall, the housing market has struggled since the stamp-duty holiday for first-time buyers was withdrawn at the end of March, and confidence was hit by the weakening economy and the euro-zone debt crisis.

The August report comes as housebuilders have enjoyed a rise in sales and profits, with Barratt Developments set to report stronger profits and unveil a special dividend for shareholders.

There is also wide-ranging regional variation when it comes to house prices, with Kent holding up reasonably well compared with other parts of the country, particularly the North and South West.

Lower- and middle-range-value homes have been affected worse by the slump than high-value properties, which have largely kept their value.

SOLID: Despite the distraction of London 2012, the housing market has remained stable

Driving

carsforkent.co.uk

By Steve Loader
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

JUST three months after the arrival of its all-new second generation Ceed hatchback, Kia has launched the estate version.

As distinctive and stylish as its hatch sister, the new Sportswagon label adds to the new-comer's charisma by replacing the uninspiring 'SW' suffix of the old version.

It's a clever car, too; at just over 4.5 metres long, the Sportswagon is more compact than major European brand rivals, and just 15mm longer than the old car, yet offers greater 'luggability' than most of the opposition, with 528 litres up to the load cover with rear seats upright, and 1,642 litres up to the roof with the 60:40 split rear seats folded flat.

The boot floor is also flush with the tailgate opening for easy loading of heavy and bulky items, while rear seats fold completely for a flat load deck – as they should on a decent estate.

There is an underfloor storage compartment too and side load areas, retractable luggage cover, load-securing net hooks, and 12-volt boot-mounted power socket. Roof rails are standard.

So, while it has all of the mainstay hatchback's sportiness, style and technology, the Sportswagon offers more of the practicality and value that made its predecessor a hit for Kia in the UK fleet and business market.

Like the SW, it was designed and engineered in Europe exclusively for Europe and is built at the brand's start-of-the-art Žilina plant in Slovakia.

And there's an air of quality and driving pleasure about the new Ceed range generally, which makes it no surprise to learn that its development was benchmarked in particular against the VW Golf.

Priced from £16,895, rising to £24,795, and also including Kia's unique seven-year/100,000-mile warranty, the Sportswagon is offered with two diesel engines: an 89bhp 1.4-litre CRDi, and a 126bhp 1.6 CRDi with six-speed manual gearboxes.

A six-speed auto is also available on the 1.6, but this does not feature Kia's Intelligent Stop & Go (ISG) fuel-saving, emissions-reducing engine stop/start technology – standard on the manual versions. Stop & Go allows the 1.4-litre model to offer 67.3mpg on the combined cycle and low CO2 emissions of just 109g/km, reducing Benefit-in-Kind taxation to just 15 per cent.

Kia is keen to stress the attention to detail on the car, even down to the way the fuel-filler flap is released: in the Far East and North America, buyers like a separate release lever inside the car, but the new Ceed has the flap linked to the central locking system so that it can be opened with just a push – the way European customers like it.

Generous standard kit includes tilt and telescopic steering wheel adjustment, height-adjustable driver's seat, air con, steering wheel-mounted controls, electric front windows, iPod-compatible sound system and Bluetooth connectivity, plus alloys on all 1.6-litre versions.

WAGONS ROLL: Kia's all-new Ceed Sportswagon replaces the previously uninspiring SW – and is yet another impressive model to the Korean's growing list of quality cars

DON'T LIKE

...some penny-pinching on the Ceed 2 seats, but then this version does come with a cracking spec including alloys, cruise control and so on.

NOT SURE

...the Kia badge can yet threaten VW, but the Koreans must be worrying Ford and Vauxhall, and really scaring the French and Japanese.

REALLY LIKE

...how Kia always looks to improve. Criticisms of the previous Ceed were promptly addressed and the new car is a huge step forward from there.

Peugeot 208 – 205's second coming?

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SINCE it launched the 205 supermini in 1983, Peugeot has sought to recreate its allure.

Not just in sales, because its staggering 5.3 million tally was actually topped by its 206 successor's 6.8 million, but also for the halo effect on the French marque itself.

At a stroke, the 205 made the hitherto staid Peugeot seem as chic and progressive as Gallic sister brands Citroën and Renault.

The most recent attempt to recreate this hero was the 207, which sold modestly and brought little lustre to the brand's famous lion emblem.

But its 208 replacement in June could be the second coming that Peugeot and its followers have longed for, delivering both volume and an uplift to the brand's image.

For a start, it's arguably the best looking car in the supermini segment, but this is underpinned by great practicalities: a big cabin for its size; another of those latterday Peugeot quality interiors; and clever powertrains, with the economic/eco-friendly credentials now demanded by buyers.

A lightweight 1.0-litre three-cylinder petrol engine is the potential star here, offering a road tax exempt 99g/km of CO2 that challenges dearer diesel options with similar tax status.

The 208 also rides well and feels nimble; Peugeot has taken a lot of weight out of the car versus the 207 and all versions I've driven feel grippy and responsive, with the lighter petrol versions best and taking the greater share of sales.

The new car comes in three and five-door configurations, starting at £9,995 for the three-door VTi 68bhp Access model.

With a design that draws younger drivers – consumers who loved the 205 so much – the 208's attractions are enhanced by the brand's innovative 'Just Add Fuel' (208 from £189/month) fixed monthly price lease including insurance. The only extras are fuel costs.

Despite a sub-10 grand entry price, entry trim

SMALL BUT PERFECTLY FORMED:

Peugeot's new 208 is arguably the best looking car in the supermini sector, priced at under £10,000 for the entry level models and is available with either three or five doors level includes electric front windows and, surprisingly, cruise control, but you need to find £850 to trade up to Access + and get air con.

At the other extreme, you get much more, as our £17,845 flagship Feline test car showed, though I question whether "Yeah, I bought a 208 in Feline trim" is something that blokes will shout about when swapping car stories down the pub. So, this trim level may get renamed soon.

I also doubt whether there is yet much call for highly-specc'd superminis, though we are constantly told how people want to to downsize from bigger cars – but keep their toys.

One Feline luxury I really like though is the standard fit Cielo full-length glass roof; this one has little neon lights that come on around the edge at night time – very upmarket, too.

The 208's long wheelbase offers great comfort in the back and the Feline's part leather seats are good, although the armrest interferes too much with handbrake operation – I folded it up most of the time.

The dashboard design is also a mixed bag. While it is good quality and features an excellent central display, it is the fashion now to wrap the fascia design around into the door trim – neater and making the dash seem further away, thereby suggesting greater roominess.

The 208's dash butts up instead against nasty panels that fit over where the door mirrors are attached.

All models also get steering wheel controls for the sound system, but that means we've lost the 'big pod' steering column arrangement that I thought worked well; shades of VHS v Betamax and a surprising climb down really when the French fought so long against giving up yellow headlamp lenses – remember those?

An injection of pace hits Mini

BMW has unveiled yet another Mini permutation – its seventh.

This time it's an eye-catching chunky coupé version of the marque's biggest model, the five-door Countryman crossover/SUV. Known as the Paceman, this is a three-door spin-off with a lowered suspension designed to deliver a more dynamic ride and drive.

It goes on sale on March 16, 2013, priced from £18,970.

Proceed will make it three

KIA unveils the third instalment of its second-generation Ceed family next weekend at the Paris Motor Show – it's the sporty all-new Proceed three-door hatch/coupé.

Peter Schreyer – former Audi designer and now Kia's design chief – said: "You know from a glance this is a car you want to drive, not just own."

The newcomer goes on sale next spring.

Cheaper price for the Beetle

VW has just made the stylish new generation Beetle £1,400 more affordable by opening order books on two new entry model engines from £15,195.

These are a turbocharged 105PS 1.2-litre petrol unit with six-speed manual gearbox (joining the DSG auto version) and 105PS 1.6-litre diesel with eco-friendly BlueMotion Technology with five-speed manual or DSG transmission.

Attraction of traction with less subtraction

PORSCHE'S unveiling of its all-wheel drive 911 Carrera 4 and 4S models coincides with confirmation the German sporting marque's cars are the UK's slowest depreciators.

A report by Auto Express magazine and trade valuation experts at CAP, shows the 911 Carrera Cabriolet and smaller Boxster roadster will lose less than half their value after three years/30,000 miles – topping analysis of some 40,000 other car models on the UK market.

Not surprisingly, Porsche cites high demand for pre-owned models and their sustainability – around two-thirds of all Porsches ever built are still on the road today.

It's already been quite a year for the marque with the new 911 arriving in late 2011 and the new Boxster in May.

Now there's a new chapter for the latest 911, with the Carrera 4 mini range making its public debut at the Paris Motor Show next weekend in both Coupé and Cabriolet formats.

Priced from £77,924 (Cabriolet from £86,583) they go on sale in the UK in December – 'standard' Porsche 911s start at £71,449.

The newcomers build on the traditional 911 layout of rear engine/rear-wheel drive by gaining an all-wheel drive Porsche Traction Management (PTM) system, for increased grip and power application, road-holding, and performance in all weather conditions.

A new dashboard indicator shows how engine torque or driving power is being shared between the front and rear axles at any moment.

KEEPING THE FAITH: Porsche opens a new chapter for its ever-popular 911 with the Carrera 4 mini range which comes in both Coupé and Cabriolet formats Wider rear wheel arches have been an identifying feature of these all-wheel drive models in previous 911 line-ups, and this is carried over by a 22mm arch extension to accommodate rear tyres that are 10mm wider.

Apart from this and the 4x4 layout, the new Carreras are identical to their rear-driven sisters, sharing the same lightweight aluminium and steel composite body, suspension, engine choices and gearbox options.

The bodywork is up to 65 kilos lighter than the previous car, allowing up to 16 per cent better fuel economy despite a hike in performance.

All versions have a seven-speed manual gearbox as standard, but the company's seven-speed Porsche Doppelkupplung (PDK) twin-clutch automatic transmission is available as an option.

The 911 Carrera 4 entry version's 350bhp 3.4-litre flat-six engine offers 0-62mph in just 4.5 seconds (the Cabriolet needs 4.7) with a top speed of up to 177mph (Cabriolet 175mph).

The 911 Carrera 4 S has a 400bhp 3.8-litre unit allowing 0-62mph in 4.1 seconds (Cabriolet 4.3 seconds) and a top speed of 186mph (Cabriolet 184mph). A new option on the 911 range is Adaptive Cruise Control (ACC), which controls distance to traffic ahead and vehicle speed and, when ordered with the PDK auto 'box, partners with on-board technology that can help prevent front-end collisions.

Hill revs up defence of his title by getting on the right track in the gym

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

HOW exactly do you train to become a British Superbike champion?

Tommy Hill, who is hoping to defend that title in the next month, knows the answer and it involves hours, upon hours, of solid work.

Hill, who has led the standings for most of the season, starts that title defence at Assen this weekend in the first of the three Showdown rides, at the end of which the BSB champion will be crowned.

But his work on the bike will only have been made possible by a grueling weekly schedule of weights and cardiovascular training in the gym.

While others may struggle to stick to such a demanding regime, the racer has the classic traits of a sportsman at the peak of their powers.

Extremely competitive, and fully focused on delivering success on the track, the 25-year-old admits he feels guilty for having a day away from training, and laughs at the idea that riders turn up and let the machines do all the work. Even if his Yamaha is capable of hitting speeds of up to 200mph.

"I guess it's understandable that people think we just let the bike do all the work," he explains.

"I could do that, but this is my career. It's a full time job, whether it's travelling up and down the country, doing PR and media or training from Monday to Saturday.

"I never relax. If I'm in the gym and see someone standing on their head on one of the balls I want to do it one-handed.

"I have chilled out a bit but my whole life is a competition."

His routine has changed down the years, and has needed to after injuries have restricted how much he can run

Pictures: ADY KERRY

FOCUSED: Tommy Hill isn't feeling any pressure to retain his Superbike title without feeling uncomfortable.

Gone are the days when he'll trudge away on a treadmill. Instead he makes the most of mixing and matching gym equipment to reflect the forces he deals with when riding his bike.

"We tried to work out how we could mimic what I need to do on a race bike, so we got the gym balls out and fell over a few times. But they work and they give me a full body workout," he said.

"If you want to train for football you can buy a pair of boots and a ball, but it's harder to go testing on race bikes. Last year we didn't test at all."

It's an obsession that doesn't stop even when he's off duty. "If I go on holiday I will be saying to myself, 'are the other riders training? Will they be fitter than me?'"

"If I have two days off I feel guilty which isn't good."

Hill, from Beckenham insists that he is happy with himself if he knows he has done all he can in the gym and doesn't worry about the pressure which is most definitely on now the Showdown series has arrived

"If I'm winning races, second is no good," he said. "This is what I do and I rely on myself and my team to keep calm. If I know I've done all I can with regards to training and being mentally prepared I'm happy, I don't want to make the mistake of thinking I could have done more.

"It's a matter of taking it race by race and not planning or being too strategic about it all. We know we can win races. I'm just going to try and treat it like I did last year. I didn't win a race (in the Showdown), but I raced to the rules."

REPORTER PUTS FITNESS TO THE TEST

BY his own admission Tommy Hill's life is a competition, so there was no way I was ever going to bother challenging him.

By nature I'm a competitive person, a casual runner, a bit of five-a-side football here and there, but the scale of the Tommy's weekly training regime makes me shudder.

But I thought I'd give some of his exercises a go, even if only using a fraction of the effort he does.

I was cautiously optimistic I'd be able to keep pace as we started the eight mile cycle to the gym, but I was soon left for dead as Tommy set off at his full pace for a mile. I was supposed to keep up, but a lay-by came to my rescue in the first of a few breathers I took - we got there eventually.

While Tommy's cardiovascular fitness is good to say the least, he obviously needs to be able to hold on to his bike while experiencing some serious G-force.

That's where the core strength exercises come into play. He doesn't spend hours pumping iron, but doing exercises that mimic the forces he'll be put under on a bike.

Most involve shifting weights while balancing on the big gym balls, a method that tests his balance at the same time as testing multiple muscles to the max.

Of course when it came to my turn, Tommy took great delight in watching me roll about on the ball for a matter of seconds while trying to hold weights that sent me crashing to the floor - laughing became a theme throughout.

After a breather it was time to head back, by a slightly shorter route, but not short enough.

Billings sees future at Kent as stars commit to the club

FUTURE: Billings set to stay for another season

KENT youngster Sam Billings said there was never any doubt he would sign a new contract at the club as he sets his sights on taking over the gloves from Geraint Jones.

The 21-year-old enjoyed a breakthrough season in Kent's one-day sides, hitting 143 in the CB40 against Derbyshire, while also being a key part of the second XI's championship winning team.

And after penning a new one-year deal at the St Lawrence Ground he said he is hoping to step into the big shoes of Kent stalwart Jones in his preferred position as wicketkeeper.

"I want to play for Kent," he said. "Jonesy had a brilliant year this year, but he's coming to the end of his career and I'm hoping I can put pressure on him next year to get the gloves.

"The main factors for signing are that at the moment I want to play cricket for Kent. That's all I want to do to be honest, and the club is definitely going in the right direction.

"We are competing in all forms of the game.

"It's a strong environment and one I want to be a part of, which has been reinforced by the senior guys that have signed.

"Next year will take care of itself as long as I keep improving. I will start in the second team with the longer form of the game and hope I can score more runs.

"This season has been a stepping stone. I know I have got plenty more to offer.

"The experience this year has really helped me, and I'm hoping I can take it into next season."

The other players to sign new deals at the club are Jones, James Tredwell, Darren Stevens, Mark Davies, Ben Harmison, Brendan Nash, Sam Northeast, Fabian Cowdrey, Ben Kemp, Ivan Thomas, and Ashley Shaw.

Other first teamers Adam Ball, Daniel Bell-Drummond, Alex Blake, Matt Coles, Rob Key, Mike Powell, Adam Riley, and Charlie Shreck are already under contract for next season.

Kent also have the option to re-sign Azhar Mahmood next season, but only for the T20 campaign. Simon Cook has left to start a career in coaching, while Chris Piesley was not offered a new deal.

CYCLING

House pedals to the peaks with Tour of Britain success

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

CANTERBURY cyclist Kristian House admits it was never his plan to be crowned King of the Mountains in the Tour of Britain.

The 33-year-old clinched the title last Sunday after finishing 19 points clear of Pablo Urtegasun in the eight-day tour, which he led on the hills for all but one stage.

The Rapha Condor rider, who grew up in Canterbury before moving to Texas, has had relative success throughout his career on the slopes, but his plan to teach the younger members of his team how to breakaway ended up with him taking the top climber jersey.

Jonathan Tiernan-Locke became the first British rider to win the Tour of Britain in 19 years, while Team Sky's Mark Cavendish won the eighth and final stage in Guildford.

"With the number of mountain stages I have won over the years I knew it was achievable," he said. "I'm not an out and out climber, I wasn't the best climber in the race, it's not about that, it's about being aggressive and opportunistic and taking the race on."

"When I looked at some of the other races I have won over the years that's how I have won them. I definitely felt it was possible, but it's not something you focus on."

The 2009 British National Champion said he started the race trying to lead by example as the team has a number of new youngsters.

"We have quite a young team this year," he said. "The aim for the team was to get those guys

IN FRONT: Canterbury's Kristian House admits his success in the Tour of Britain came as a result of trying to set a good example to his young team mates into the breakaways, the best way to do that is to lead by example. I do feel like the old guy, they are all 22, 23 and one is 19. It's cool to see their progress.

"I actually find that the higher level the race the better I do. It focuses me a bit more. When you've raced in the Tour of Britain it's harder to focus for the smaller races when there are four people at the side of the road.

"To be honest, I would rather get a stage win than finish eighth overall; that's what I wanted to do. I didn't go into it thinking about jerseys at all, I just thought about going for a stage win then see how I'm doing."

He has two weeks off before embarking on the Tour of Tobago which starts in the first week of October, but insisted it's not a holiday.

"It should be pretty good," he said. "Last time we were there we had a lot of fun, and we raced really hard. It's not the kind of holiday I would take. If I was going on a proper break I wouldn't take my bike."

Everitt enjoys freedom of his attacking role at the Belmont

THE season may only be into its second month, but it would be difficult to begrudge Whitstable Town's Michael Everitt for keeping an eye on the top goalscorer charts at the club.

The midfielder, who joined in the summer after 13 years at Folkestone Invicta, has netted twice this term and takes delight at pointing out his efforts to his brother James, a striker yet to score for Invicta this term.

He's been given more licence to get forward after playing the holding midfield role in Neil Cugley's side at Folkestone.

"I keep reminding my brother I have scored more than him, but he comes back with the fact they are higher in the league," said the 29-year-old. "We are not in a place where we deserve to be."

"At Folkestone we had a lot of attacking players and my main responsibility was to hold. At Whitstable we play a slightly different formation. I get the opportunity to break forward. It's nice to know I'll get the opportunity to score."

"I used to score lots at youth level when I started at Folkestone, then I was a right back. I progressed into central midfield which is more natural for me."

He joked that his target was to get one goal this year, but is now hopeful of getting to eight in his first season at the club which has taken getting used to after making more than 500 appearances at Folkestone.

"Obviously there is a lot of change to take in," he said. "I used to live just down the road from the ground before, so I have to be more organised now."

RUGBY

Players set simple target for survival in new league

CANTERBURY are taking a step-by-step approach to the new league season in London Two.

Coach Andy Pratt said players had set their own objective of simply wanting to improve game by game rather than aiming straight for the top.

They certainly have showed signs of taking that objective to heart, after a poor opening loss against Bournemouth was followed by wins against Barking and Lydney ahead of this week-end's trip to Worthing.

"The game at Bournemouth wasn't so much about the result, but the performance," Pratt said. "There are areas we have addressed; it's one we have to put down as an experience."

"We did an exercise with the guys to see what their thoughts were and, to summarise, it was to improve game by game - if we do that we will be safe in the league. I don't think challenging for the top is realistic."

"We want to stay up, but we don't want to do just enough."

He said the squad had been strengthened in the summer to cope with the new league.

"We knew we had a good squad but we wanted to widen it because it's going to be a longer season, and with the standard going up the collisions are harder," he said. "Players now know they have got to perform because we have brought in players across the board."

FOOTBALL

BACK: Paul Bowden-Brown hoping to help Town

Former Ashford and Maidstone chief is back in the boardroom

PAUL Bowden-Brown is back in football on a rescue mission at Thamesmead Town.

The former part-owner of Maidstone United and then Ashford United managing director has joined the board of the Ryman One North club in a bid to change their financial fortunes.

The club is currently waiting on the completion of a host of new facilities at its Bayliss Avenue home, which will include an artificial 3G pitch, stand and clubhouse.

It is being built by the Thamesmead Trust, a private company building the facilities with a view to them being used by the wider community.

But delays in the project have had a financial impact on the football club, which will act as a tenant when using the site.

That's where Bowden-Brown comes in. It's hoped he can help the club by developing income streams and bringing in outside investment.

"They put an SOS out some weeks ago for some help," he said. "Another person in footballing circles suggested my name and I spoke to the manager Keith [McMahon]."

"I sat down and listened to their problems, they are in a very difficult situation. I said I will give it a go."

One of his tasks will be to improve what is one of the lowest gates in the league. Just 70 people witnessed their first home game of the season, a problem not helped by their proximity to London, and the number of other local clubs.

"The gates are disastrous, so what we need to do is re-market the club," he said. "We have got to re-market it so old supporters come back and younger supporters come in."

"When you look around the ground there are a couple of advertising hoardings, but you could put a 100 more in. The community has to be told about the club."

"We have got to get the business world around Thamesmead to be very involved. We have got to find external funding if the club is to survive."

The 65-year-old left the Stones in September 2010 after admitting he couldn't take the club any further. His departure turned sour and has since seen him banned from setting foot inside their new Gallagher Stadium by the current owners.

He went on to become managing director at Kent Invicta League side Ashford United who had been reborn following financial ruin, however ill health forced him to leave in November last year.

"My family looked at me and said I was stark raving bonkers," he said. "My health hasn't been perfect, so I've told them I won't be full time."

"I couldn't take the club (Maidstone) any further. They (owners Oliver Ash and Terry Casey) have done a fantastic job. I have got nothing but admiration for what they have done. I'm not perfect as the record will show, but I will always be a Stones fans. That was my life for 22 years."
